YANKS CROSS WESER; DRIVE FOR HANNOVER

British Gain 30 Mi. Toward Bremen

PARIS, April 6 [Friday] — (AP)—Lt. Gen. Simpson's United States 9th army broke across the Weser river 157 miles west of Berlin yesterday and the British 2d army in a 30 mile lunge swept to within 39 miles of the great shipbuilding port of Bremen as the enemy fled eastward along the north German plain.

Without losing a man, the 9th army crossed the Weser with troops and tanks south of the Pied Piper town of Hamelin, 23 miles southwest of Hannover. The 9th wound up a day of 28 mile gains by crossing the Weser and was pounding up the Hannover highway.

The 9th army's 2d armored and 30th infantry divisions crossed the Weser. The 9th and the British 2d held at least 48 miles of the west bank of the Weser, with captured Minden roughly in the center.

Broader Than Weser

The Germans were in flight toward the Elbe river, the last river barrier 50 miles west of Berlin, and as much as 120 miles east of the Weser. The Elbe, while no Rhine, is broader than the Weser.

The fleeing convoys were hammered by hundreds of allied war planes.

Field Marshal Montgomery's Canadian and British forces were battling northward on a 100 mile front, and by capturing Stolzenau on the Weser river 39 miles from Bremen the British vanguards had traveled 120 miles east of the Rhine.

One column on the west was also 40 miles from Bremen after fighting up within less than three miles of Diepholtz.

The Canadian 1st army shook loose an armored column on a 12 mile tear that ripped back into the German peninsula and into Uelsen, on the highway to Bremen and within 53 miles of an arm of the North sea. This drive, sweeping northward parallel to the British armored push, increased the threat to two German armies in Holland.

Patton Advances in Thuringia

Lt. Gen. Patton's United States 3d army struck across Thuringia's hills 130 miles southwest of Berlin in a fanning push that lacked 63 miles of cutting the reich in half. The enemy was reported falling back to the south for an expected last stand in Bavaria's mountains.

One 3d army tank column drove to within 170 miles of a junction with the Russians and 66 miles from Plauen, which controls the last good highways and railways into Bavaria.

The battle of annihilation in the encircled Ruhr basin rose in fury as the United States 1st and 9th armies pressed the assault on possibly 150,000 German troops.

Gain on Sides of Hamm

The 9th army was knocking in the roof of the trap, advancing up to nine miles both east and west of pivotal Hamm, and was five miles from the Ruhr city of Dortmund. One robot bomb factory had been overrun. Pilots said the enemy was massing tanks and self-propelled guns on the east side of the pocket, apparently to attempt a breakout.

On the southern end of the front, Lt. Gen. Patch's United States 7th

NAZI COCKINESS WILTS AND DIES IN PRISON CAMPS

(How are the German prisoners of war behaving and what are they thinking? How are we treating them and how do they respond to the treatment? These questions are discussed in the following article, the first in a series, by a Tribune reporter who recently visited five large prisoner of war camps in four states.)

BY CARL WIEGMAN

[Copyright: 1945: By The Chicago Tribune]

Three hundred thousand Germans who once believed that the United States was a decadent democracy beneath the contempt of the "master race" are changing their minds. They are prisoners of war in this country, who now find themselves working, in spite of themselves, to help the nation which they once despised.

Their cockiness has gone. They realize they have lost the war, and are living in dread that the peace terms may send them to Russia as members of labor battalions.

These estimates of the prisoners' state of mind were given by the commanding officers of the prisoner of war camps at Camp Ellis, Ill.; Fort Custer, Mich.; Camp Shelby, Miss.; Clinton, Miss., and Memphis, Tenn.

Bad News from Home

The American officers said that nearly every week the prisoners get bad news from home which influences their thinking. One hears that his wife or father has been killed. Another is told that his home has been destroyed by bombs or fire. Another gets his letters back stamped: "Addressee moved; left no forwarding address."

Incidents to illustrate the changing attitude of the prisoners occur almost daily at every prison camp. Maj. D. S. Waldrep, commanding officer of the camp at the army service forces depot, Memphis, Tenn., has a series of symbolic pictures drawn by a prisoner artist.

The first picture, in modernistic style, shows a German eagle with a victory wreath and a hand grasping a sword. The second picture, drawn a few months later, shows two candles, one burning and the other out, with a German youth rushing to snatch victory from the darkness. The third picture shows the face of a German youth, registering agony as he looks at the setting sun, while hands on an organ keyboard play the last chord.

Pastoral Scenes Now

In his most recent pictures the artist has abandoned symbolism. He draws pastoral scenes, one entitled "Peace and Plenty," and cartoon murals for the camp recreation rooms, Maj. Waldrep said.

Letters which the prisoners send back to their families in Germany also illustrate their changing attitude. At first the letters contained sentiments that they hated the Americans and that the Americans hated them. Other letters said that they were treated like swine. They bragged that Germany would win the war.

Most of that kind of talk has ceased. In their recent letters, the

Freed French Get Meal and $20 in Paris

BY ROBERT SAGE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

PARIS, April 5 — With 18,000 French war prisoners liberated last week by the American 3d army and the gates of more prison camps being thrown open by the advancing allies, the number of repatriated prisoners reaching Paris each day has jumped from 1,000 to nearly 4,000 in the last 48 hours. This average is expected to rise until the 25,000 peak is reached.

Three or four times a day long trains of aged coaches arrive and anywhere from 700 to 1,000 repatriated prisoners tumble out. They are clean and freshly shaven, but are clad in remnants of uniforms they were wearing when captured in 1940 plus an assortment of civilian apparel. Many have rosy faces, but others have aged prematurely. Some seem to be dazed.

Some Women Wait

There are no mothers and wives on the platform to kiss the homecoming soldiers. Families are notified after the prisoners' arrival. But a little line of women waits at the station from morning until night in the hope their husbands are coming home.

Formalities at the station are reduced to a minimum. Medical examinations and establishment of identity are made at frontier reception centers. There collaborators with the Nazis are weeded out and sent to special camps for further questioning, altho some managed to get thru to Paris today.

After receiving military honors on the platform, the men trundle their baggage into a canteen. They are handed a 1,000 franc bill [worth $20].

Get Substantial Meal

A substantial meal with a bottle of red wine is served and girls pass among the soldiers, distributing cigarets. At the end of the meal each man receives a Red Cross package containing chocolate, cigarets, coffee, and canned goods.

Then the Parisians return to their homes while those from the provinces are taken in buses to reception centers. There they spend the night before starting on the last lap of their journey.

Bulgar Court Dooms 16 as Fascist Collaborators

LONDON, April 5 (AP)—Sixteen persons were sentenced to death as Fascist collaborators last night after trials by a Bulgarian people's court, the Sofia radio reported. Seventy others were sentenced to prison terms ranging from one year to life.

IT'S OFFICIAL NOW; ARGENTINE QUINTS ARE QUINTUPLETS

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina, April 5 [Reuters]—The two boys and three girls born to Valota de Diligenti, wife of a wealthy Argentine business man, in June, 1943, were today pronounced quintuplets after proceedings against the parents for failing to register the births in the proper manner.

The evidence removed all doubts regarding the authenticity of Argentina's quintuplets, the court said.

Two of the quints are perfect twins, while the others bear little resemblance to each other.

4,082 CANADIAN DRAFTEES AWOL; 11,836 OVERSEAS

OTTAWA, Ont., April 5 (AP)—Canada sent 11,836 drafted troops overseas up to the end of March to reinforce her volunteer army, but at that time 4,082 conscripts who had been scheduled to go abroad were still absent without leave and unaccounted for, the government announced today.

The total Canadian army in the United Kingdom and Europe was 285,000 on March 31, an increase of 45,000 in 12 months.

Most of the missing troops were understood to be listed as deserters. Of their number, 2,400 were enrolled in French-speaking Quebec and 1,000 in the western prairie provinces. There were 2,391 Quebec-enrolled men among those sent abroad, 3,899 enrolled in the prairies, 3,466 in Ontario, 1,192 in the Pacific command and 888 in the maritime provinces.

50% of V-1 Bombs Faulty, Fell Far Short, Dutch Say

LONDON, April 5 (AP)—Dutch citizens were quoted in western front dispatches today as saying that 50 per cent of the V-1 flying bombs aimed at London and allied continental bases fell within a few miles of their launching sites, apparently because of mechanical defects. Canadians who captured a V-bomb base in northeastern Holland were told the Germans had boasted that these weapons soon would be launched on America.

Composer Sibelius at 80 Reported to Be Starving

LONDON, April 5 (AP) — The Finnish composer, Jan Sibelius, who will be 80 next December, is slowly starving in his rustic home a few miles outside of Helsinki, Walter Legge, founder of the Sibelius society here, said today. "Sibelius received a Finnish state pension equivalent to $1,200 a year," said Legge, "but with the devaluation of Finnish money, that is now practically valueless even if the food were there."

2 AFL Chiefs Get 8 Years in Labor Racket

New York, April 5 [Special] — Two AFL union chiefs, Joseph S. Fay and James Bove, described as two of the nation's most powerful labor leaders, today were sentenced to prison terms of 8½ to 16 years in Sing Sing for extortion and conspiracy.

The men, called ruthless thieves, were found guilty on March 15 of extorting $62,000 from a contractor on the city's $300,000,000 Delaware water supply project. They were also convicted on a second count of conspiring to extort an additional $280,000 from contractors to guarantee labor peace.

In imposing sentence, State Supreme Court Justice William H. Munson warned that if reprisals were attempted against witnesses who testified against the labor leaders "the court will take judicial recognition and recommend that the maximum sentences be served."

Ridicules Leniency Pleas

The threat to witnesses was broached by District Atty. Frank S. Hogan as he replied to Defense Atty. John W. McGeehan's plea for leniency for Fay. McGeehan contended Fay was charitable and well liked, that he "achieved thru his life a position of respect thru his honesty."

"The only work Fay ever did was with his big fists—assaulting people," Hogan snapped. "Both of these men are ruthless, grasping thieves who shamelessly betrayed the members of their unions."

Fay is vice president of the International Operating Engineers union and Bove formerly was vice president of the International Hod Carriers, Building and Common Laborers union.

Bodyguard in Court

Contemptuously commenting that he had "more respect for the gangster who levels a gun at your head because they at least take a chance," Hogan said:

"This courtroom is packed with stooges of Fay and Bove. Looking around I see no less a personage than Jack Wallace, Fay's bodyguard. These men are his friends, here to cheer him up."

It was then the prosecutor asked the judge to admonish the defendants of his intentions if any witnesses suffer for their testimony.

Hogan said he had been unable to get two contractors to testify in the case altho the men told him they paid Fay and Bove $125,000. The district attorney added: "One of these men was threatened that if he came to New York a friend of Al Capone's would 'take care of him.'"

RUSSIA SCRAPS ITS NEUTRALITY PACT WITH JAPS

Tokyo Accused of Aiding Nazis

Japs Expected It

San Francisco, Cal., April 5 (AP)—Japanese sources said tonight the soviet denunciation of the Russian-Japanese nonaggression pact was "by no means unexpected." Domei news agency, in a broadcast, quoted "informed quarters" as saying that a speech by Marshal Stalin last October and "other developments in the international situation clearly indicated that the soviet attitude toward Japan was undergoing a radical change." This recalled a passage in Stalin's address in which he referred to Japan as an "aggressor nation."

LONDON, April 5 (AP)—Russia denounced her neutrality pact with Tokyo today. She accused Japan of helping Germany. This action possibly cleared the way for eventual soviet entry into the Pacific war.

In a strongly worded note Moscow linked the European and Pacific wars for the first time by saying that Japan "is fighting against the United States of America and Great Britain, which are allies of the soviet union." Moscow broadcast the announcement of its action to the world.

Puts Japan in Enemy's Camp

The question whether Russia will go to war against Japan was left unanswered. The denounced five year neutrality pact does not expire until April 25, 1946—more than a year from now.

But the note which Foreign Minister Molotov handed Naotake Sato, the Japanese ambassador, in Moscow placed Japan squarely in the enemy's camp and stated Russia's opinion that Japan had violated the pact.

Shortly before Moscow acted, the government of Premier Gen. Kuniaki Koiso in Tokyo fell in the midst of a political and military crisis.

The Japanese crisis was precipitated by the American invasion of Okinawa and perhaps also by strong prior indications of the ominous soviet diplomatic blow.

Previous Action Recalled

Russia's note to Japan was reminiscent of the same line taken by Russia last September, when Russia went to war against Bulgaria. At that time Moscow accused that axis satellite of aiding Germany against Russia and declaring "Bulgaria actually has been in a state of war with the soviet union for a long time."

Animosity has marked Russian-Japanese relations for 50 years. Both countries have strong armies massed on the Russian-Manchurian frontier. There border "skirmishes" amounting to large scale battles were fought and largely overlooked by the rest of the world during the opening days of World War No. 2 in Europe.

The repudiation of the pact gave Russia a free hand for joining in any joint action the allied nations might decide to take against Japan at the San Francisco conference opening April 25.

British Press Pleased

The British press hailed Russia's action as foreshadowing soviet military aid which might put an early clincher on the Pacific war.

The first official reaction came from H. V. Evatt, Australian foreign minister, here for a dominions conference. He said the Molotov declaration "demonstrates that Russia will play a notable part in the future security and welfare of the peoples of the Pacific."

He said the denunciation of the treaty would be "hailed with the greatest satisfaction thruout the whole Pacific area."

Adm. Suzuki, 77, Once Foe of War Party

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS]

Adm. Baron Kantaro Suzuki, 77 year old retired Japanese statesman who was regarded as a moderate and an opponent of Japan's program of conquest before the war, was recalled by Emperor Hirohito yesterday to serve as premier and form Japan's third war time government.

Premier Koiso's cabinet, racked by military defeats and home criticism, resigned earlier in the day in quick succession to the denunciation by Moscow of the Russo-Japanese neutrality pact. The "gravity of the situation," climaxed by the invasion of Iwo and Okinawa, caused the fall of the Koiso cabinet, the Tokyo radio said.

Suzuki had been serving as president of the privy council but had been in semi-retirement since he was wounded in a revolt by young Japanese army officers in 1936.

Sees Peace Offensive

He may fit into the critical Japanese situation as the front man for a peace offensive, in the opinion of Glen Babb, Associated Press foreign editor, who spent many years in Japan. Suzuki was not in sympathy with the army extremists who have dominated the government since the 1936 attempt to kill him.

The young officers who led that revolt held Suzuki was counselling moderation by the emperor. Several invaded his home and he received several sword cuts so severe his life was despaired of for a time.

Elder Statesmen Confer

Collapse of the Koiso regime had been staved off for a time by his promise, fulfilled only last week, of forming a new "sure victory" political party that would include leading figures from all of Japan.

Fall of Koiso was announced by the Japanese board of information "with earnest hopes for the materialization of an even more powerful cabinet in view of the gravity of the war situation," said the Tokyo broadcast.

Marquis Koichi Kido, lord keeper of the privy seal, recommended Suzuki to the emperor as a new premier after a conference of senior statesmen. Shortly thereafter, the emperor summoned Suzuki to his presence "and commanded him to organize a cabinet."

Held Many Posts

The Domei news agency said, "the people, of course, will not be perturbed in the least by a change of governments."

Suzuki was born in December, 1867, in Osaka and had an active career in the Japanese navy. He served as vice minister of the navy, commandant of the Kure naval station, commander in chief of the combined fleet, chief of the navy general staff and war councillor. He was named grand chamberlain in 1929 and concurrently privy councillor.

After resigning as grand chamberlain in 1936, he was granted the title of baron. He became president of the privy council last August upon the death of Yoshimichi Hara.

Koiso had reshuffled his cabinet at least four times, replacing and shifting some members and adding new persons to an advisory board.

Ah Love, Ah Marriage, Ah Five T-Bone Steaks!

St. Louis, Mo., April 5 (AP)—The wedding yesterday of Charles Pifat, 58, and Mrs. Clara Capeder will be long remembered by the justice of the peace who performed the ceremony and the marriage license clerks at city hall. Pifat gave them, point free, five hard-to-get T-bone steaks. He's a meat merchant.

NAMED GROUND FORCE CHIEF IN DRIVE ON JAPAN

Nimitz Will Lead Naval Action

BY ROBERT YOUNG

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., April 5—Gen. MacArthur will be given supreme command of all United States army forces in the war against Japan, the joint chiefs of staff announced tonight.

Adm. Nimitz, commander of the Pacific ocean areas, will be given command of all American naval forces in the drive against Japan. Gen. Arnold will continue in command of the 20th [B-29 Superfortress] air force.

The announcement ended months of speculation as to who will lead the land invasion of the Japanese homeland. It had been rumored that Gen. Marshall would take command, and that Gen. Eisenhower would replace him as chief of staff after the defeat of Germany.

From Europe, Too

MacArthur, now commander of the Southwest Pacific area, will command both the American land forces already in the Pacific and the large forces to be shifted from Europe after Germany falls, tonight's announcement disclosed.

A spokesman for the joint chiefs of staff said the directive applied only to United States army and navy forces. He said that any decision on over-all allied commanders in the Japanese war will come later.

The appointment of MacArthur to lead the army in the war against Japan has long been urged by members of congress and many military leaders. When MacArthur fulfilled his vow to return to the Philippines and drive the Japanese from Manila, in February, he made it known that he was ready for a new assignment. He declared that the new American battle cry is: "On to Tokyo!"

Text of Announcement

The full text of the joint chiefs of staff announcement of the command directive for the war against Japan follows:

"The joint chiefs of staff, with the approval of the President, have modified the command organization for the war against Japan with a view to giving full effect to the application of our forces against the Japanese, including the large forces to be redeployed from Europe, taking into account the changed conditions resulting from our progress in both the southwest Pacific and the Pacific ocean areas.

"The rapid advances made in both areas, which have brought us into close proximity with the Japanese homeland and the China coast, and the corresponding change in the character of operations to be conducted, are the considerations which dictated the new directive.

All Army Forces

"Gen. MacArthur, commander of the Southwest Pacific area, under the terms of the new directive will be given command of all army forces and resources in the Pacific theater. Similarly, Adm. Nimitz, commander of the Pacific ocean areas, will be given command of all naval forces and resources in the Pacific theater. Gen. Arnold will continue in command of the 20th air force.

"The joint chiefs of staff will continue to exercise strategic direction of the entire Pacific theater and will charge either Gen. MacArthur or Adm. Nimitz with the over-all responsibility for conducting specific operations or campaigns. Normally, Gen. MacArthur will be charged with the conduct of land campaigns and Adm. Nimitz with the conduct of sea campaigns. Each commander will furnish the forces and resources of his service for the joint forces which are required for the conduct of the operation or campaign which has been duly directed by the joint chiefs of staff.

In Any Part of Theater

"Essentially, the new arrangement permits either commander in chief to conduct operations or campaigns in any part of the entire theater as directed by the joint chiefs of staff, and the choice as to which shall be charged with the responsibility in each case will be dependent on the nature of the operation or campaign which is to be undertaken."

Military observers, hailing Gen. MacArthur as this war's outstanding military strategist, praised the action of the joint chiefs of staff in teaming him with Adm. Nimitz. They said that the smooth cooperation of MacArthur and Adm. Nimitz played a big part in the recapture of the Philippines.

Hinted Choice of MacArthur

On March 28, Nimitz disclosed in Washington that the joint chiefs of staff were considering the question of a new army command in chief for the war against Japan and hinted that Gen. MacArthur would lead the drive to Tokyo. The naval commander said the prosecution of operations on the large land masses involved would be largely the function of the army. He called attention to the fact that the army is Japan's principal strength and is massed for the most part in the home islands.

Adm. Halsey, commander of the 3d fleet, recently said he hoped to enter Tokyo with MacArthur.

Thru his succession of victories in the Pacific, MacArthur has gained the reputation of "the man who knows more about licking the Japs than any other man." Tho relatively undersupplied and at times neglected in favor of the European war, the five star general saved Australia from Japanese invasion, kept his vow to return to the Philippines, and paved the way for the ultimate defeat of the Japanese in the East Indies and Malaya. The losses in forces under MacArthur have been consistently low.

Wounded in World War

Son of a noted American army general who fought in the Civil and Spanish-American wars, MacArthur fought thruout the first World war and was twice wounded and many times decorated. He was appointed superintendent of the United States military academy in 1919 and was chief of staff of the United States army from 1930 to 1935.

MacArthur, who is 65, saw many years of service in the Philippines, both as a young officer and later as commander of the Philippine department of the army. He became director of the organization of the Philippine defense in 1935 and was retired in 1937. He returned to active service as commander of American forces in the far east on July 26, 1941, and led American and Filipino troops during the Japanese invasion later that year. He was appointed supreme allied commander of land, air, and sea forces in the Southwest Pacific in March, 1942.

RUSSIA'S ACTION ON TREATY MAY NOT MEAN WAR

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS]

Russia's denunciation of her neutrality treaty with Tokyo does not necessarily free her immediately to join in fight against Japan. If both parties stick to the letter of the compact they must maintain neutrality toward each other until expiration of the treaty's five year term, April 25, 1946.

The pact, signed in Moscow April 13, 1941, and ratified 12 days later, binds the two parties "to maintain peaceful and friendly relations between them" and "to observe neutrality thruout the duration" of any conflict in which either might be engaged with another power. The clause setting the term of this obligation is:

"Article 3—The present pact comes into force from the day of its ratification by both contracting parties and remains valid for five years. In case neither of the contracting parties denounces the pact one year before expiration of the term it will be considered automatically prolonged for the next five years."

What Russia has done is to forestall any obligation to be bound by the pact beyond April, 1946, and to give notice that she recovers full freedom of action as regards Japan from that time.

CAPITAL HAILS RED MOVE; SEES SOVIET-JAP WAR

Price of Russian Action Stirs Concern

BY WALTER TROHAN

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., April 5—Russia's denunciation of its neutrality pact with Japan was hailed widely thru the capital today as opening the door to an early soviet declaration of war against Tokyo.

In the general rejoicing over the expected Red entrance into the Pacific conflict with its promising prospect of an earlier end to the war against Japan, there was an undertone of concern over Russia's price for participation in that struggle.

Mindful of the heavy soviet bill for the European war—the whole of Estonia, Latvia, Lithuania; sizable portions of Poland, Finland, and Romania, and puppet status for Yugoslavia, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, and the rest of Poland and Romania—Sen. Taft [R., O.] raised the question of soviet demands in Asia.

Part of China?

"The soviet abrogation of the Jap pact is significant but not conclusive," he said. "It does not clear up the recent impression of Russia's noncoöperation in international matters. This thing can be done for her own interests. There is no question but that Russia is seeking some part of China now occupied by Japan."

The senator's statement and a similar position expressed by Sen. Wheeler [D., Mont.] was interpreted as referring to Capitol hill reports that Russia is demanding Korea, Manchuria, and inner Mongolia as the price of her participation in the Pacific war. It has been reported that President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill accepted this price at Yalta in a secret commitment.

The Russian action was also acclaimed thruout the administration as improving the possibility of a successful conference at San Francisco, which had been threatened by Russian demands for voting advantage in the assembly and for recognition of the provisional government the soviets have established in Warsaw. It was felt that the Russian step was announced at this time in an effort to offset the unfavorable reaction against the Russian demands of the last week.

In military circles, it was held possible that Japan might seize the initiative and attack Russia at Vladivostok in an effort to hamstring a Russian offensive. Such an attack could not hope for ultimate victory, but might be successful in delaying a Russian offensive for months, it was said.

Altho there were expressions of hope that the denunciation of the treaty meant Russia soon would go to war against Japan, it was pointed out that if both parties adhere to the terms of the compact, they would remain neutral toward each other until expiration of the treaty's five year term on April 25, 1946.

Congressional comment on the Russian action follows:

SEN. JOHNSON [D., Colo.]—That's what we have been waiting for. It means that we will not be compelled to clean up the Japs from the continent of Asia and that we can concentrate on blockading and reducing the Japanese islands at less cost of American lives.

SEN. VANDENBERG [R., Mich.]—This is undoubtedly a preview of vitally important things to come.

SEN. AUSTIN [R., Vt.]—This is a significant step toward ultimate victory.

SEN. FERGUSON [R., Mich.]—I certainly hope that it means immediate cancelation of the treaty. Any pressure that can be brought on Japan at this time would be beneficial to us.

SEN. CONNALLY [D., Tex.]—The soviet statement puts the matter in a clear and convincing light. . . . This undoubtedly will improve the prospects of a successful conference at San Francisco. There is no doubt that the action of Russia already has had its repercussions in Japan as expressed in the resignation of the Japanese cabinet.

Good News to Coast

SEN. MAGNUSON [D., Wash.]—It's good news for us on the Pacific coast. It gives us a chance to correlate our bases in the Aleutian chain and bring a two-prong war against Japan.

SEN. O'MAHONEY [D., Wyo.]—The jaws of the pincers, which since the crossing of the Rhine, have been grinding Germany are now closing in or Japan. In Germany there is no government. In Japan, there is a new government of moderates. It may very well be that this Russian announcement may bring a speedier end to hostilities in Asia than we all can expect now in Europe.

SEN. GEORGE [D., Ga.]—I never had any doubt but that Russia would denounce the treaty and actually become a participant in the war against Japan. I think there is every reason to anticipate that Russia will want to establish her interests [economic at least] in northern China.

SEN. BARKLEY [D., Ky.]—The Russian action is a very gratifying development.

VICE PRESIDENT TRUMAN—It should shorten the war.

Text of Moscow's Statement

LONDON, April 5 (AP)—Here is the text of Moscow's statement on the denouncement of the Russian-Japanese neutrality pact:

"At 3 o'clock this afternoon the people's commissar for foreign affairs of the U. S. S. R., Molotov, received the Japanese ambassador, Mr. Sato, and in the name of the soviet government made the following statement to him:

"'The pact of neutrality between the soviet union and Japan was concluded on April 13, 1941—that is, before the attack by Germany on the U. S. S. R. and before the outbreak of war between Japan on the one hand and Great Britain and the United States of America on the other.

Situation Has Changed

"'Since that time the situation has radically changed. Germany attacked the U. S. S. R. and Japan—Germany's ally—helped the latter in her war against the U. S. S. R.

"'In addition Japan is fighting against the United States of America and Great Britain, which are the allies of the soviet union. In such a situation the pact of neutrality between Japan and the U. S. S. R. has lost its meaning and the continuance of this pact has become impossible.

Promises to Tell Tokyo

"'On the strength of the aforesaid and in accordance with Article Three of the pact mentioned, which envisages the right of denunciation one year before the expiration of the five year period of validity of the pact, the soviet government by the present statement announces to the Japanese government its desire to denounce the pact of April 13, 1941.'

"The Japanese ambassador Mr. Sato promised to bring the declaration of the soviet government to the attention of the Japanese government."

KOO SAYS JAPS SEEK TO PATCH UP CHINA PEACE

Hamilton, N. Y., April 5 (AP)—T. Z. Koo, adviser to China's delegation to the world security conference at San Francisco April 25, said today that "Japan has been flooding Chungking with emissaries in an effort to patch up a peace with China."

Speaking at a Colgate university weekly assembly, Koo, an honorary alumnus, asserted that the Japanese had lost much of their arrogance in recent years.

Koo said that a Japanese emissary, "whose name would be known to most Americans," visited Chung King in 1944 and that "there was no arrogance this time," in contrast to emissaries in 1942 and 1943.

"He admitted," Koo said, "that the war in the Pacific had reached a very critical stage for Japan and that Japan would like to unite with China for a 'co-prosperity circle.'"

CHICAGO PASTOR GOING TO PARLEY ON WEST COAST

Dr. Preston Bradley, pastor of the People's church of Chicago, said last night he had accepted an invitation from Secretary of State Stettinius to attend the San Francisco security conference.

Stettinius requested him to go to the conference, Dr. Bradley said, and "make any contribution he could to its success." Dr. Bradley said he would be issued credentials as an observer and commentator, but he emphasized his role would be "unofficial."

Dr. Bradley will broadcast his regular W-G-N program from San Francisco on April 24.

GLEE OVER RED PEACE PARLEY PRAISE DIMMED

Pravda Silent on San Francisco

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., April 5—High enthusiasm in official circles here over a Moscow broadcast of Tuesday night applauding arrangements for the San Francisco world security conference was dampened today by sobering disclosure that the Red approval was extremely limited.

Administration officials had been ecstatic over a soviet broadcast, secured by the federal communications monitoring system, which indicated that the attitude of Dictator Stalin toward the San Francisco conference was not lukewarm, but actually highly coöperative.

Broadcast to Hungary

It had been assumed here that the high praise of the conference was broadcast from an editorial in Pravda, official soviet publication which is regarded as the spokesman of the Kremlin.

Today it was learned that the broadcast was only in Hungarian and was directed toward Hungary by the soviets in an effort to counteract Nazi Propaganda Minister Goebbels' suggestion in that country that a split is impending between President Roosevelt, Prime Minister Churchill, and Dictator Stalin.

Assumption Erroneous

The initial assumption that the Red broadcast was taken from Pravda at the time officials were looking for a friendly gesture from the Kremlin was found erroneous by a study of the text. The broadcast did not say the article broadcast was from Pravda, but that it was an article by David Zaslavsky, who is an editorial writer for Pravda.

Like other feature writers for the official publication, Zaslavsky prepared special articles for the Moscow radio. It became clear today the articles had not appeared in Pravda when news dispatches from Moscow failed to include the article in a digest of Pravda news.

The broadcast said the San Francisco conference is being held "at the right time from every point of view" and would "accomplish its task."

POWERFUL RED FORCES READY FOR JAP WAR

Washington, D. C., April 5 (AP)—If Russia goes to war with Japan, at least two Red armies, equipped with the finest modern military material, will be ready to join combat immediately in the far east.

Behind them will be a string of brand new air strips, swarming with fleets of fast, hard hitting bombers and fighters.

With them will be large, well organized United States and British military missions, prepared to cooperate with the Russians to whatever extent they permit in prosecution of their part of the campaign.

Area Shrouded by Mystery

These are the highlights of the little that is known about the world's most mystery shrouded military theater. The secrets of the Red army's far eastern military establishment have been so closely guarded that, in comparison, those of the Russian forces in Europe are wide open.

Before Germany invaded the soviet union in 1941, the Russians had three armies in the far east. One of those armies was reported authoritatively to have been moved west during the battle of Moscow in 1941.

By now, it has probably returned to its old ground, but in any case, the two original armies are in the field. Their quality has been attested by brief dispatches reporting that they have paraded thru Khabarovsk showing the best in tanks, motorized troops, artillery, and automatic arms.

A strong indication that even other armies are ready for action in the far east is seen in the fact that Russia's Siberian forces have not been reported prominently in action since the battle of Stalingrad in 1942.

New Air Bases Ready

The aviation forces and facilities in the soviet far east are as secret as the ground forces. It is known, however, that new air bases have been built along the line from Alaska that Russian flyers use to bring lend-lease aircraft from the United States.

Soviet naval forces in the far east are believed to be almost negligible, despite the fact that large ship building centers have been developed at Komsomolsk and other far eastern cities.

NAZI COLLAPSE NEAR, DECLARES HIMMLER ORGAN

STOCKHOLM, April 5 (AP)—Das Schwarze Korps, Nazi organ run by Gestapo Chief Himmler, said today that Germany now is "only days or perhaps weeks from absolute collapse."

A Berlin dispatch to Dagens Nyheter said Schwarze Korps declared editorially that the German people were "in the remarkable situation of being forced to acknowledge it may be possible to defeat us militarily."

Declaring "our belief in the rightness of our cause hasn't changed by a single letter," the article insisted the Germans would fight on even if their military chances were even more decreased.

Dulles Accepts New Deal Bid as Peace Conference Adviser

John Foster Dulles

Washington, D. C., April 5 [Special]—John Foster Dulles, the Wall st. attorney who counseled Gov. Dewey on foreign policy during the latter's unsuccessful Presidential campaign, today accepted appointment as an official adviser to the United States delegation to the San Francisco security conference.

At a press conference in New York the internationalist lawyer announced he would support President Roosevelt's view that the United States should have but one vote in the assembly. And he quickly added that this should not be construed as meaning that he felt Russia should be similarly restricted to one vote.

He contended he was "still going to be a Republican" but deprecated the thought that there would be "any partisan politics in the American delegation."

Refused Vandenberg

Dulles previously had turned down a request of Sen. Vandenberg [R., Mich.] that he serve as an adviser to the senator at the conference, which Vandenberg will attend as a member of the American delegation. Dulles told Vandenberg he wished to have "no official status" at the meeting.

But in his letter to State Secretary Stettinius released by the state department, Dulles changed his mind. He noted that his appointment was "concurred in by the President."

"My dear Mr. Secretary," Dulles wrote Stettinius, "You have told me that it is your desire, concurred in by the President, that I act as a general adviser to the United States delegation to the San Francisco conference.

"As you know, I have previously stated it was my preference to have no official status at San Francisco, but rather in a private capacity, to seek to advance the great purpose of that conference. You asked me to discuss the matter with you and after our discussion in Washington last Monday, you said that you still felt that I could best serve in an official capacity.

Accepts with Appreciation

"After reflection, I am happy to advise you that I accept with appreciation your invitation to me to be an adviser to the United States delegation."

Dulles conferred several times on the Dumbarton Oaks plan with Cordell Hull when Hull was secretary of state and, both before and since the Presidential campaign, has dealt with the state department in his capacity as representative of the Federal Council of Churches' commission on a "just and durable peace."

Last December he criticized the Dumbarton Oaks scheme for preserving world peace by force, declaring it would be ineffective and terming it "little more than scenery."

Dulles was born in Washington. His grandfather, John W. Foster, was secretary of state in the cabinet of President Benjamin Harrison, and one of his aunts was the wife of Robert Lansing, President Wilson's secretary of state during World War I.

Former Morgan Attorney

He is a member of the international firm of Sullivan & Cromwell, and at one time was attorney for J. P. Morgan & Co. Among his clients have been foreign governments and international banking houses whose foreign investments ran into billions of dollars.

He has been described as one of the busiest loan arrangers in America in the early years after World War I. He once was quoted as saying: "It is of tremendous importance that nothing should occur to bring about any continued cessation of American loans to foreigners."

During the Presidential campaign last year the British expressed satisfaction upon learning that Gov. Dewey was relying upon the internationalist lawyer for advice on foreign affairs.

DEFENSE OF RED REGIME SEEN AT SAN FRANCISCO

Russian delegates to the coming San Francisco conference will point to military victories of the Red army and Russia's industrial progress as justification of the dictatorial form of their government, the New World, official organ of the Catholic archdiocese of Chicago, declares in an editorial in its current issue.

The editorial predicts an aloof Russian attitude toward the premise that a condition of membership in any international organization for peace should be willingness of the member nations to guarantee civil and religious rights of individuals and minority groups.

"It is obvious that there will be no immediate conversion to this thesis in the Red way of life," the New World says.

The United States holds some trump cards in the international games, the editorial asserts. It points to our ability to survive physically and states that in the end Russia and Great Britain must "go along with our demands; otherwise they penalize themselves."

RUSSIANS DRIVE INTO SOUTHERN VIENNA SUBURBS

Smash Defenses 4 Miles from Heart of City

LONDON, April 6 [Friday]—(AP)—Tank led Russian shock troops battled to the southern city limits of Vienna yesterday while other Red army forces launched a drive to encircle the Austrian capital after slashing across two of its supply links with Germany and Czechoslovakia.

The assault forces captured the suburban towns of Ober-Laa and Unter-Laa, 4½ miles southeast of famed St. Stephan's church in mid-city, Moscow disclosed.

Simultaneously, other soviet troops were rolling up a German bulge in Czechoslovakia's Carpathian mountains, captured industrial Zywiec in southwest Poland, and battled closer to the Croatian puppet capital of Zagreb in northern Yugoslavia. In the far north, the Russians hurled enemy remnants back into Danzig bay in a clean-up of coastal territory north of captured Gdynia.

Three Red Armies Drive On

While three Russian armies surged forward along a 350 mile front in the south, Berlin said that a Red army offensive on the Oder river before the reich capital was expected "in the next few days."

Two armies were involved in the battle for Vienna. Southeast of the city they were believed to have linked after the capture of the Bratislava gap fortress of Bruck, and together they extended a siege arc around the city to 83 miles. The arms of a developing pincer southwest and northeast of the city were 46 miles apart.

South of Vienna, Marshal Tolbukhin's 3d Ukrainian army battled to the city line in the face of violent Nazi artillery fire. Six miles south Tolbukhin's tankmen captured Laxenburg, site of the old imperial Austrian castle and one mile south of the big suburban town of Modling.

Thrust Thru Woods

Southwest of the city, Tolbukhin's men thrust a two to three mile wide wedge thru the Vienna woods in a sweep around the capital that cut across the highway linking Vienna with Linz, 89 miles to the west. Gaining five to six miles these forces were within 13 miles of the Danube.

Tolbukhin's troops also sped westward in a wide sweep around the capital that cut across the highway linking Vienna with Linz, 89 miles to the west.

In a six mile advance these forces drove within 13 miles south of the Danube river at a point northwest of Vienna by capturing Breitenfurth and Hochrotherd, six and seven miles southwest of the capital. They were within two miles of the Vienna-Linz railroad and were threatening to cut all Vienna's westward communications along the south bank of the Danube.

Southeast, east, and northeast, Marshal Malinovsky's 2d Ukrainian army surged forward in gains of seven miles along the south and north banks of the Danube river.

BOMB TARGETS BETWEEN YANK AND RED FRONTS

LONDON, April 5 (AP)—United States Fortresses and Liberators hurled 3,500 tons of explosives today on German targets along the likely routes of the United States 3d and 7th armies' drive eastward. Nearly 5,000 allied planes from Britain battered the reich.

An American force of 1,200 heavies and 600 fighters struck at the Nazi "zero zone," the area of central Germany now being compressed by the Russians from the east and the Americans from the west. The targets were on a line forming a huge arc around the western part of Czechoslovakia. The bombers blasted the choked rail traffic at Nuernberg.

Other bombers wheeled southward and smashed at an ordnance depot at Ingolstadt. Still others pounded rail bottlenecks at Bayreuth and at Plauen, near the Czechoslovak border, and hit an ordnance center at Grafenwohr. Italy based United States 15th air force Fortresses showered fragmentation bombs on parked enemy aircraft on the Campoformido air field near Udine, a fighter base, and Liberators attacked rail yards at Brewica and the Dravograd rail bridge in Yugoslavia.

Argentine Minister's Duel Off; Seconds Can't Agree

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina, April 5 (AP)—A duel between Cesar Ameghino, 73, Argentine finance minister and acting foreign minister, and Matias Rodriguez, robust young army colonel, was called off tonight when their seconds failed to agree on the point at issue. Rodriguez had charged that Ameghino, as a lawyer, has trafficked on his influence as a cabinet member. Rodriguez's seconds contended the statement could not be considered a personal insult. Ameghino's seconds argued that the minister's name, nevertheless, was injured. The lack of agreement among seconds automatically closed the incident under the dueling code.

Britons' Lives Cut to Pattern of War Time Do's and Don'ts

BY E. R. NODERER
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

LONDON, April 5—From the time he arises in the morning until he retires at night, the war weary Britisher spends the day wending his way thru a maze of governmental controls which regulate nearly everything he does.

The ministry of food tells him what to eat; the board of trade tells him what to wear; the ministry of labor tells him where to work. The ministry of war transport tells him how to get where he is going and what time to get home, and the ministry of fuel and power determines whether his home will be warm or cold when he gets there.

His Tongue Curbed

The ministry of supply restricts his newspaper to about four pages and the ministry of information plus censorship controls what he reads.

He may think what he likes but he can't always say it. The minister of home security is empowered under defense regulation 18-B to detain any one indefinitely without charge or trial, who may be suspected of conducting himself contrary to national interests.

Life in the sixth year of war is an unending pattern of governmental do's and don'ts. The country is plastered with signs exhorting the British to telegraph less, telephone less and save more. Housewives are urged to shop only between 10 a. m. to 4 p. m., to walk short distances, and signs on buses even advise them to keep one hand free to hold on. At railroad stations travelers are greeted by signs: "Is Your Journey Really Necessary?" which resulted in the production of one entitled: "Is Your Honeymoon Really Necessary?"

Germans to Blame

Altho the British accept all these regulations and many more, they don't necessarily like them.

Most restrictions stem from the unexpected arrival of the German army at Dunkerque in 1940, which was regarded as such a serious threat that the public here submitted to large scale regimentation in a belated effort to get a war machine organized while there was still time. Now that the war is apparently nearly over in Europe, the people are beginning to look forward to the return of some of their freedom tho there have been numerous hints from officialdom that it may be necessary to continue some controls for several years after the war.

Direction by the ministry of labor of workers into war industries resulted in such a shortage of man power in the consumer fields that most Britons spend a part of every day standing in line waiting for something.

One Queue After Another

The country, they say, is suffering from "queuitis." There are queues for taxis, buses, trains; for groceries, fish, coal. Even in restaurants it's necessary to queue up to get lunch and again to pay the bill.

A Tottenham merchant was arrested yesterday on a charge of obstructing free passage along a street when a colossal queue formed in front of his store. Word had spread he had ice cream for sale. The queue soon became a "seething mass of people," the police said, but the magistrate found it wasn't the merchant's fault and dismissed the charge.

Since April, 1942, it has been compulsory to queue for buses. Signs erected at each stopping place direct the public, "This Side." This works reasonably well, altho the people have a tendency to make a wide end run from the back of the queue to the front when their bus turns up.

Bus Service Cut

Restrictions on all forms of passenger transport have been one of the most serious war time inconveniences. Bus line gasoline was cut 50 per cent at the outbreak of the war and later reduced further on the quota system. Many bus stops have been eliminated and, with very few night owl exceptions, all services are withdrawn at 9 p. m. on weekdays and noon Sundays. Country and long distance bus lines have been canceled and street car service greatly curtailed.

Taxis get only three gallons of gas daily and the wear and tear have cut London's pre-war taxi fleet to 4,000, few of which bother to operate at nfght. There is no gasoline ration for private cars.

PROTESTS POUR INTO CAPITAL ON MEAT SHORTAGE

BY WILLIAM MOORE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., April 5—Appeals for meat poured into the capital from every part of the nation today as the senate recognized the meat famine as the nation's No. 1 problem.

Altho the senate was in session, Chairman Thomas [D., Okla.] kept the senate agriculture committee, which is holding hearings on the meat situation, at work all day.

Senators who are not even members of the committee attended in order to hear the testimony of army, navy, and war shipping and war food administration chiefs on ways of feeding American civilians while supplying American fighting men and feeding the rest of the world.

Say Allies Shirk Job

Witnesses gave this picture: There will be sufficient meat and other food for the services, but civilians will have to share diminishing supplies with foreign nations and carry an international relief burden that American allies are partially shirking.

Chairman Thomas summoned agriculture secretaries of the 48 states to testify April 16 and 17 in an effort to piece together an official picture of the national situation.

Thomas announced that he is receiving hundreds of appeals, many of them from persons who "don't dare to sign" their letters. He read a telegram from Gov. J. Howard McGrath asking that Rhode Island be given enough meat to feed its population.

Other senators reported that they were receiving telegrams and letters from their constituents. Sen. Wheeler [D., Mont.] said Montana butchers are closing their shops because they have no meat to sell.

Hits OPA "Poppycock"

Sen. Bushfield [R., S. D.] told the committee: "The OPA has been telling us we have more meat for civilians than before the war. That's all poppycock. You can ask any housewife, and she'll tell you, 'No!' —despite what the OPA says. The OPA has some smart boys, and they can do anything with figures."

Sen. Wheeler placed before the committee and OPA a charge that OPA itself is responsible for the black market to which he said Americans have resorted to get meat. His information, which he said was furnished by a man who came recommended by persons of unquestioned standing, was this:

That racketeers are "getting red ration points out of the OPA New York office some way" and peddling them to butchers at $6 a thousand. That the butchers then use the red points to buy meat from legitimate dealers and sell the meat without ration points. And that one man known to Wheeler's informant, whose name was not divulged, obtained 40,000 red points in this manner.

Black Market in Capital

OPA officials here denied the story, and New York OPA executives said they believed Wheeler's information concerned counterfeit red points being sold by a gang that is being rounded up. But Wheeler said his informant was talking about genuine ration points obtained from the OPA office.

Meanwhile there were complaints of a widespread black market in meat within the capital itself that some said would equal that in New York, where senators say 90 per cent of the meat is sold in black markets.

The OPA's entire price control program was attacked as being responsible, along with the government agencies' regulation of farm economy, for the whole food shortage.

The system of paying taxpayers' money in subsidies to keep prices down came in for especial censure.

Carl H. Wilken, economist for the National Organization of State Agriculture Secretaries, testified:

"Food subsidies are just plain nonsense. The consumer is not saving money by them. He has to pay the price of his food, plus, the subsidy, plus administrative costs."

Shipstead Echoes Stand

Sen. Shipstead [R., Minn.] said: "We are trying to buy meat on deferred payments thru subsidies to be paid after the war. But the people have the money to pay higher prices in the black market, and then they will pay the subsidies in taxes too. The subsidy system is like buying furniture on the instalment plan, only in the case of meat you don't get it."

Sen. Wherry [R., Neb.] hammered away all day to get the bureau chiefs to offer a guaranteed price for hogs weighing over 270 pounds. Bigger hogs could be raised on wet corn that is in danger of spoiling, he said, and bigger hogs would mean more pork. But agriculture department spokesmen frowned on the plan.

Maj. Gen. Carl A. Hardigg of the army quartermaster's office gave blunt warning that the army will take whatever steps are necessary to keep meat moving to the fighting men. Hardigg and navy and WSA spokesmen said they are getting the meat the services need, but with difficulty. Hardigg revealed that the army quit supplying meat to civilians of liberated areas three months ago because of the American shortage.

Uncle Sam Pays Again

Lt. Col. Ralph Olmstead of WFA said wheat supplies are adequate, but that distribution problems are serious. When he referred to "problems relating to financing of Canadian wheat for relief purposes," Sen. Cordon [R., Ore.] demanded an explanation, since Canada is a member of the united nations relief and rehabilitation administration, established for global relief.

Olmstead explained that Canada has no appropriation for foreign relief by military authorities before UNRRA takes over.

"Then if we're going to supply liberated countries," Cordon retorted, "we're going to have to dig down deep into Uncle Sam's pocket."

GERMANS SUSPECTED OF USING PRISONERS TO SHIELD CONVOYS

BY HAL FOUST
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

WITH THE U. S. 9TH AIR FORCE, April 5—Allied prisoners of war are helplessly shielding German troop movements from American air attack. American pilots report that in diving upon retreating Nazi motor convoys they have identified frantically waving truckloads of prisoners just in time to withhold their bombs and machine gun fire.

The pilots suspect the Germans are deliberately exposing the prisoners in violation of the Geneva conference. Otherwise, they said, stockades in the paths of advancing American armor would be evacuated without distributing truckloads of prisoners thruout columns of war equipment.

Pilots also report that the Germans are painting the American white star identification on motor vehicles. Even without this trickery, American assault from the air has been complicated by the rapidity of ground movements. Medium bombers under a 5,000 foot cloud ceiling raided road traffic ahead of our prodding tank columns today. They also bombed railroads and air fields. In the Ruhr pocket, bombers destroyed four German tanks.

PROBE REPORTED NAZI MURDER OF NEGRO SOLDIERS

WITH U. S. 3D ARMY, April 5 (AP)—The 3d army is investigating a 5th infantry division report that several Negro members of an ordnance ammunition company were murdered by SS troops who captured their position.

A single bullet hole was found in the head of each of the Negroes. One witness said two SS guards forced a Negro to run thru a field and then shot him.

The 3d army also is investigating a report that the same SS men fired on the ambulances of a field hospital, killing a medical major and at least two aid men.

GAIN 5 MILES ON OKINAWA; U. S. CASUALTIES 973

175 Yanks Killed; Jap Guns Slow Drive

GUAM, April 6 [Friday] (AP)—Low American casualties for the first four days of the Okinawa invasion were reported by the navy today in announcing a five mile advance on the north end of the 10th army line and increasing resistance in the south near the capital city of Naha.

Adm. Nimitz said 175 United States soldiers and marines had been killed and 798 wounded up to midnight Wednesday. This reflected the lightness of the opposition. He gave no figures for naval casualties. No Japanese casualty figures were announced.

Gain Along Isthmus

Marines at the north end of the line scored gains along the narrow Ishikawa isthmus, still finding "ineffective" opposition, but 24th corps infantry men moving on Naha, a city of 66,000 population, ran into increasing resistance from fixed defensive positions of artillery and mortars.

Their advance, previously measured in miles, was only about 3,000 yards. It appeared possible that the first big action of the campaign was building up.

The delay in Yank progress promised to be brief, however, for the Yanks have the most powerful artillery support force ever available in Pacific operations.

3,000 Yards to Airfield

The Japanese apparently have a strong line north of Naha to defend the city and its neighboring air fields. But 77th division troops on the west coast had pushed to within 3,000 yards of Machinato air field, four miles north of Naha, yesterday while the 7th division on the east coast was driving for the Yonabaru strip.

The island beaching area is lighted at night while the Americans bring ammunition, supplies and equipment ashore, said Robbin Coons, Associated Press correspondent.

In the first five days of the campaign 65 Japanese aircraft were destroyed attacking American positions.

Vern Haugland, an Associated Press correspondent, reported the marines crossed a narrow channel to tiny Yabuchi Island just off the Katchin peninsula and occupied it without opposition.

"Furious Battle," Says Tokyo

San Francisco, Cal., April 5 (AP)—American invasion of Okinawa is a "curtain raiser" for an impending invasion of Japan, a Nipponese naval spokesman said today in a broadcast advising his listeners "confidentially" that the "day of annihilation" of allied invasion forces is near.

Nipponese propagandists asserted "the decisive battles of the Okinawas are becoming increasingly furious." They said an American transport and destroyer were sunk by Japanese aircraft—two more ships in a long list of unconfirmed naval claims.

BOMBERS POUND HONG KONG AND SINK 19 SHIPS

MANILA, April 6 [Friday]—(AP)—Philippines based heavy bombers attacked the waterfront of Hong Kong across the China sea on Wednesday, dropping 168 tons of bombs which set huge fires and sank nine merchant ships. Two other merchantmen and a destroyer were damaged.

Gen. MacArthur reported that the 1,000 pound bombs raked shipyards and waterfront installations as well as shipping in the vast harbor.

Oil storage tanks were left burning, with smoke rising 7,000 feet.

Other American bombers blockading the China sea wrecked six small freighters from French Indo-China to Formosa and also bombed Indo-China coastal targets at the cost of one plane.

AUSSIES RUSH TO TAKE OVER ISLES REWON BY YANKS

Re-enter Pacific Areas to Secure Labor

BY ARTHUR VEYSEY

(Tribune War Correspondent on Leave from the Pacific)

Australia is losing no time restoring its tight control of Pacific islands seized from Germany in the last war and turned over to Australia under mandate from the league of nations.

Before the Japs overran the mandated area three years ago, the islands were operated by and for the 4,000 white inhabitants, with natives doing the work and paying the bills.

In 1940, the plantation and mine operators and traders—all British except 400 Germans and 150 Dutch and Americans—had 39,000 indentured laborers, little better than slaves, recruited for three year periods and paid 10 Australian shillings [$1.61] a month.

Help Obtain Native Labor

Representatives of the Australian government have entered all of the mandated areas with American or Australian troops to help secure native labor for the army and navy.

Except for a small gold mining area in New Guinea, the mandated islands are valuable chiefly for coconut plantation sites.

As before the war, there are no real estate taxes in the mandated islands. Plantation sites are leased from the government. The government provides police protection for the planters, assists in recruiting labor and then, thru a head tax, collects most of the money which the laborers receive. The head tax, with taxes on imports and a split in the gold production, pays costs of operating the islands' government.

Natives Choose No. 1 Boy

In some areas, the natives are permitted to help pick their number one boy—the police boy who aids the Australian government overlord.

Chief among Australia's mandated islands are northeastern New Guinea; New Britain, where American marines landed Dec. 26, 1943; the Admiralties, where the American 1st cavalry division landed Feb. 29, 1944, and Bougainville, where Americans landed Nov. 1, 1943. The Admiralties are clear of Japanese. On the other islands Australian troops are now cleaning up pockets of Japs isolated by Adm. Halsey and Gen. MacArthur in their three year campaign for bases.

Damage to plantations resulting from construction of bases has been assessed to the American army. For the average cocount tree knocked down by a bulldozer, Australia presents a bill for three dollars.

'HEAD MEN' WILL RULE OKINAWANS UNDER U. S. FLAG

BY THOMAS MORROW

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

OKINAWA, Ryukyu Islands, April 5—The first post-invasion baby born under the auspices of the military government was resting pretty well in the civilian hospital today.

With civilians streaming in from the hills and coming out of caves, Lt. Col. Donald T. Winder, a former Chicago, Ill., attorney of 33 N. La Salle st., was doing a brisk business as military government officer of the 3d corps. He expects to entertain 30,000 Okinawans shortly.

Temporarily, civilians are being herded into the unwrecked houses in Sobe and other towns. Military government officers are feeding them from stores of food found on the island. The main items of food are rice, sweet potatoes, and soybeans. The navy will soon unload 70 tons of rice and other food items and clothing. Natives whose houses have not been blasted by gunfire will return to them.

Stop Emperor Worship

The Okinawans will be encouraged to carry on their own form of government, according to Lt. Gene De Mambro, Detroit, without the Japanese top governor. The head of each family is responsible for the actions of his family members and is, in turn, guided by the head man of a group of 1,000.

The only ban laid down by the military government is that all worship of the Japanese emperor shall stop. Each house is equipped with a cupboard-like altar where they were required to make daily prayers to the emperor.

At the refugee camp the natives, a little more than four feet tall, milled about, chattered, laughed gayly, and worked up a little community singing. Lt. Daniel Jones, Gary, Ind., in charge of the camp, and his assistant, Tech. Sgt. William S. Green, said the Okinawans, realizing they were to be treated kindly, were happy and coöperative. Head man of the camp is Taro Nakindakare, who said thru an interpreter that he used to have a hat store on some island in the vicinity. He came to Okinawa to visit, he said, and got caught by the war. Taro said he thought it would be nice if he were allowed to open a store for the natives.

An interpreter explained that the women just arriving were classified by the tattooing on their hands as prostitutes. In the United States their income tax payments based on earnings would not be high.

Women Do the Work

Also present was Nao Me Agi, who speaks pidgin English. She said her husband, now an officer in the Japanese navy, is a doctor and they once lived in California.

"I never thought I would end up here," remarked Lt. Jones, glancing at the nonedscript group clad in kimonos, army shorts, and sweat shirts. "There's one orphan boy here that's mighty cute. I've got a notion to take him to Gary with me."

The Okinawans' homes, usually of one story, contain four rooms, one of which houses a large metal pot for cooking and chinaware for eating, and each has a home factory for extracting juice from sugar cane. Most of the male Okinawans, one officer observed, confine their activities to lurking about the house plucking at a three string mandolin. While he busies himself with his music the women go out to work.

Captured Okinawa horses—discouraged looking beasts—began to figure in the military. One mortar company seized 30 of the horses and became mounted marines.

RETREATING JAPS LOSE SUPPLIES TO ILLINOIS TROOPS

33d Division Makes a Big Haul

BY WALTER SIMMONS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

NAGUILIAN, Northern Luzon, April 2 [Delayed]—So much material is being left behind by the Japs retreating in the Baguio sector that the list reads like an army surplus property sale.

Along the Naguilian-Baguio road in a 24 hour period the 33d Illinois National Guard division made a big haul. Here is a partial list compiled by Maj. Stephen Downey, Sacramento, Cal., a staff officer, and his assistant, Maj. Leo Wiltrakis, 4330 Washington blvd., Chicago:

Seven cases of 120 millimeter anti-aircraft shells, 835 cases of 150 millimeter shells, 625 cases of 105 millimeter shells, 394 cases of 75 millimeter anti-aircraft ammunition, 156 cases of grenades, 108 cases of picric acid, 92 cases of 37 millimeter rockets, 600 cases of punk, 51 cases of 120 millimeter mortar shells, 312 cases of miscellaneous ammunition, 200 cases of bolts and rivets, 82 drums of oil, six depth charges, three crockery mines, and one gross of horseshoes.

Attack Bulldozers

The booty was captured by the 129th regiment, commanded by Col. John D. Frederick, Springfield, Ill.

Bulldozers of the 108th engineers, commanded by Lt. Col. Francis P. Kane, 4814 Addison st., Chicago, have recently been the target of an attack by fanatical Japs armed with grenades, but none of the attempts has been successful. Col. Kane's assistant is Maj. Charles Schaffer, 7331 Phillips av., Chicago.

Because the advance toward Baguio hinges on road construction, most of today's action took place at the terminus of the new supply routes near Galiano and northwest of Pugo. There the 2d battalion of the 123d infantry, commanded by Lt. Col. James W. Hilton, 7835 Kimbark av., Chicago, took Hill 3000 in a surprise night attack against light opposition. When the Japs counter-attacked in the morning 63 were mowed down.

Shells Kill 83 Japs

In the Galiano area the 1st battalion, commanded by Lt. Col. Charles Coates, Peoria, Ill., counted 83 Japs killed by artillery fire.

Despite the steep grades which burn out their clutches, tanks have been active in the Galiano area. Their special mission has been to neutralize mortars. Capt. Smith's tank—the Avenger—is commanded by Sgt. Harold Blackberg, Harvey, Ill. Lt. Paul Rector, Champaign, Ill., is maintenance officer of the outfit.

FILIPINO TIPS OFF AMERICANS AND 3 JAPANESE DIE

BY WALTER SIMMONS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

NAGUILIAN, Northern Luzon, April 1 [Delayed]—A Filipino civilian came to the right place today when he hurried into the 33d division military police headquarters and reported that three Japanese in civilian clothing were west of this captured town.

His story was credible because several Japs have been found recently in native garb, wearing their hair long and studiously imitating the native walk. First Lt. Albert Stariha, Muskegon Heights, Mich., selected a detail and sped to the scene.

Call for Surrender

Lt. Stariha deployed Corp. Max Tate, Danville, Ill., Pvt. Raymond Harford, Oelwein, Ia., and Pvt. Dale Brown, Mount Pleasant, Mich., in a skirmish line. They approached the suspects and shouted for them to surrender.

Instead the three men, carrying bundles on their backs, walked away rapidly. Corp. Tate, who received the soldier's medal for risking his life to extinguish a fire in a New Guinea ammunition dump, broke ahead of the skirmish line and fired at the man who appeared to be the leader. Lt. Stariha and Harford shot and killed the two others when they fled.

The first Jap, who was wounded, dived into some nearby bushes and committed suicide with a grenade before Tate could reach him. A search of the bodies disclosed that he was a captain and the two others privates. In their packs the men had 50 pounds of demolition charges, primer cord and caps, a shovel, four booby traps, bayonets, a pistol, and 15 hand grenades.

Carried Map Marking Bridges

The captain—an engineer—carried a map on which three river bridges near Bauang were marked—and the Japs had almost reached Bauang when they were shot.

Like the military police, Sgt. James Linquist, Bloomfield, Conn., has a job which usually keeps him in the rear areas. But he got his Jap just the same.

When an enemy straggler was reported near Tuao, Linquist and Corp. Estil Petty, Louisville, Ky., went out to investigate. They found the Jap. He ran away.

Instead of shooting, Sgt. Linquist went into a sprint too and brought the Jap down with a flying tackle just as he entered a sugar cane patch.

"It comes sort of natural to Lindy," Corp. Petty explained. "He used to play a lot of tackle back at Penn State."

U. S. GUNNERS SHELL NAZI STRONG POINTS OPPOSITE 5TH ARMY

ROME, Italy, April 5 (AP)—British marines and other 8th army forces stabbed northward today along a narrow isthmus between the Valli di Commacchio lagoon and the Adriatic to threaten Porto Garibaldi, key harbor for the Po valley industrial center of Ferrara. Resistance became fiercer as the Germans dug in on terrain dried out by the recent good weather.

Inland to the west American artillery pounded enemy ammunition dumps and strongpoints opposite the 5th army. Otherwise the rest of the front was limited to the usual patroling.

[The DNB German news agency reported that United States 5th army troops had attacked along the Ligurian coast early this morning after an artillery barrage lasting several hours.]

Flyers attacked targets in Germany, Yugoslavia, Austria, and Italy, and enemy coastal guns south of the La Spezia naval base on Italy's west coast were bombed. Lt. Robert P. Thorpe, Muncie, Ind., piloted a B-25 on sortie No. 50,000 of one United States 12th air force Mitchell bomber wing. Lt. Milton J. Varous, 3944 S. Scoville st., Berwyn, Ill., of the 15th air force, brought down a bomber south of Munich.

British Bombs and Shells Sink Ships Off Norway

LONDON, April 5 (AP)—R. A. F. bombers before dawn today rounded out 250 attacks on enemy shipping in the last six months by blowing up a medium sized merchant vessel and setting another afire in the Skagerrak and Kattegat seas. The freighters were moving toward the southern Norway coast. A British destroyer force patroling the Norwegian coast early yesterday torpedoed and sank one supply ship of a seven ship enemy convoy.

PLANES DESTROY 11 BRIDGES USED BY BURMA JAPS

CALCUTTA, India, April 5 (AP)—Fighter bomber pilots of the first air commandos, striking after three days of inactivity because of weather conditions, have destroyed 11 bridges along Japanese lines of communication in lower Burma and western Thailand in the last 24 hours.

They also leveled a group of 10 buildings believed to house an important Japanese base at Toungoo, between Meiktila and Rangoon.

9TH ARMY RACES FOR HANNOVER IN 28 MILE GAIN

British Drive for Bremen; Patton Rolls On

army scored gains of 14 miles, battled into Kitzingen beyond the River Main, and severed the highway between toppling Wuerzburg and the Nazi shrine city of Nuernberg, only 34 miles ahead of advanced American forces.

The French 1st army farther south fought nearly two miles south of the captured city of Karlsruhe and the Paris radio said one column now was only 12½ miles from the south German city of Stuttgart.

Allied armies, capturing at least 26,600 additional prisoners on Wednesday, were driving for the knockout all along the front.

On the northwestern end of the front the Canadians in a five mile advance captured Almelo, 35 miles from the Zuider Zee, and cut one of the main supply routes to enemy V-bomb sites along the Dutch coast.

Send Patrols Into Arnhem

Farther southwest, where the Canadians are about 20 miles from the Zuider Zee in the Deventer-Zutphen area, infantry already was battling into one V-weapon area where numerous robot bomb and one or more rocket bomb launching sites are situated. The Canadians were sending patrols across the Neder Rhine [Lek] into Arnhem.

Lt. Gen. Dempsey's British 2d army thrust toward the North sea still was checked at Lingen, where heavy fighting raged as the British strove to clear the enemy from that road and railway junction 50 miles from the sea.

On the east flank of this salient, thrust deep across escape routes from northern Holland, a bridgehead was enlarged over the Dortmund-Ems canal northeast of the fallen enemy air base at Rheine.

Capture Canal Bridges

The British 2d army, joining forces with the American 9th at Minden, seized control of more than 15 miles of the western bank of the Weser from that city northward after capturing three bridges over the Weser-Ems canal.

The 9th army was negotiating for the surrender of Minden, which would have given the Americans one bridge, when British tanks suddenly appeared on the north and began shelling the city.

Whereupon negotiations were terminated for the moment and the startled garrison sent the bridge tumbling into the Weser.

Sent reeling beyond the Weser by the furious American and British blows, the Germans blew up all the bridges in the sector around Minden. The 9th promptly brought up heavy pontoons, bridged the river near Tundern, and kept right on going.

In the rush to the Weser, the converging British and American columns cut off the German 84th division and a number of smaller units in a pocket seven miles wide and 15 miles long. American infantrymen hurried up to begin the mopup.

The big communication center of Osnabrueck, 38 miles to the rear, was captured by British Commandos. More than 800 prisoners were taken in street fighting.

2d Armored Gains 28 Miles

The 9th army's 2d armored division which racked up 24 hour gains of 28 miles in hurtling thru the mountains to the Weser opposite Hamelin, south of where the 5th armored division reached the stream on Wednesday.

Using Hamm as a pivot, the Germans were believed forming a crescent shaped defense line for the 21 divisions cut off in the 3,700 square mile Ruhr pocket.

Ninth army troops battering to cave in the roof of this box ran into heavy fire inside Hamm, the north eastern end of the pocket.

Lt. Gen. Hodges' United States 1st army hammering in from the east and south slugged ahead as much as 4 miles during the day.

Biggest gains came from the base of the 1st army corridor which cuts off the Ruhr. Here an infantry column backed by tanks fought thru light resistance to near Latrop, in the vicinity of Berleburg, which is 55 miles southeast of Hamm.

Two mile gains were scored by other American columns which drove into Almert and Winkhausen, 9 miles northwest of Berleburg.

Report Chutists Aid Patton

The Germans said parachute troops were being rained down by allied planes in the path of Lt. Gen. Patton's 3d army, which was pounding across Thuringia.

The 6th armored division captured Muehlhausen, with a population of 36,000, and then drove on eight miles northeast to near Schlotheim, which is 132 miles southwest of Berlin.

Here the 3d army was 72 miles from the great transit city of Leipzig and 170 miles from the Russian lines.

The 4th armored division to the south pushed four miles to the vicinity of Muehlberg, 68 miles from the border of Czechoslovakia.

Seize Ball Bearing Plant

The German air force was reenforced, and more than 30 enemy planes bombed and strafed the American lines, particularly between the falling city of Wuerzburg and Ochsenfurt, on the Main river, 11 miles to the southeast.

Capture of Wuerzburg, on the Main's west bank, would put the 7th army 25 miles from Schweinfurt, important manufacturing city.

14 POLISH WAR CHIEFS RESCUED BY U.S. TROOPS

New York, April 5 (AP).—Fourteen Polish generals, including a former chief of staff and the commander who defended Warsaw in 1939, have been rescued by the American 9th armored division at Dossel, near Kassel, the Polish telegraph agency reported in a Paris dispatch today.

The generals were among 2,400 Polish officers freed from the German prison camp. The rescued former Polish chief of staff is Gen. Tadeusz Piskor. Liberated with him was Gen. Walerian Czuma, who opposed the Germans when they besieged Warsaw. Also freed was Gen. Leon Barbecki, former inspector general of the Polish army.

Arrest Italian Colonel as Hijackers' Leader

ROME, April 5 (AP)—A band of hijackers was smashed today with the arrest of nine men, including the leader, an Italian air force colonel. They were accused of stealing hundreds of tons of allied foodstuffs and channeling them into the Rome black market. The carabinieri command announced that the band included a railroad brakeman and two men dressed in colorful carabinieri uniforms who acted as "guards" as tons of food were stolen from freight cars.

NAZIS EXPECTED TO HOLD OUT IN DUTCH POCKETS

Ordered to Fight to the Last Ditch

BY DAVID DARRAH

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

PARIS, April 5—The German pattern of defense, once organized resistance is broken, took further shape today with the announcement from Gen. Eisenhower's headquarters here that there is no indication that the Germans were getting out of Holland.

The Germans, it was expected, will allow themselves to be cut off in Holland by the advancing allied troops and cling on from another pocket like the Ruhr pocket and five or six others along the Atlantic coast from Dunkerque to the mouth of the Gironde river.

Army leaders today counseled against taking an over optimistic view about the Netherlands becoming swiftly another liberated country. German withdrawals from Holland which are now taking place comprise mostly garrison troops and stores and supplies, while all operational and combat troops are remaining behind with instructions to hold out to the last ditch. The Atlantic coast pockets, in which 100,000 Germans still remain, have held out since last September.

The Dutch pocket probably will be equally hard to mop up owing to the nature of the terrain in Holland. Other German pockets exist on the Baltic, and information here is that the last German resistance will form pockets also in the Bavarian Alps and the Black Forest and probably in northern Italy, in all of which munitions and food are known to have been stored up. In radio broadcasts from Germany heard here, the population is urged to fortify centers of resistance everywhere between the thrusting American columns.

Nazi Radio Helps Troops Locate Their Families

LONDON, April 5 (AP)—The German radio, which formerly tried to trace German soldiers for anxious relatives, has done an about face. With the war well inside the reich, Berlin broadcasts now are helping soldiers seeking word from their families, many of whom have moved from the war zone or have been evacuated.

LIFE IN GERMAN CAMP IS WEIRD MERRY GO ROUND

BY JOHN THOMPSON

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

NEUSTADT, Germany, April 5—The eyebrows of the Ukrainian girl from Stalino lifted merrily as she told a funny story. On the concrete courtyard a German motorbike circled with a Frenchman driving and his sweetheart hanging on behind. The German director with the Hitler mustache clicked his heels as he answered questions.

We were in a model foreign labor camp, which had been liberated a week ago by tank columns. Only a few of the 1,000 Russians, Poles, Dutch, French, Italian, Belgian, Czech, Ukranians, Lithuanians, Estonians, and Bulgarians were gone. The others had heeded the advice of the camp director.

Workers Treated Fairly

I use the word model because this camp, originally built in 1939 for German workers, has attractive, red brick and stucco buildings arranged in communal design. The workers themselves said that the director treated them fairly.

But there were exceptions even in this "model" camp. Russian men were segregated from other workers and slept in special wooden barracks. Russian women also were held to quarters separate from the other girls. The girl from Stalino, Lena Turowska, who is not yet 20, said:

"We were not supposed to go out with any one except Russians. If they caught us we were placed in the bunker."

The bunker was a small, wooden jail with a tiny fenced in inclosure. The girls were given half rations and one blanket for their wooden bunks.

Girls' Jail Always Full

"The spielhaus was always full," laughed Lena. Spielhaus means playhouse.

Most of the girls of the camp were 15, 16, or 17. None I saw was over 20.

In the rear of the camp was a merry-go-round. Lena said the younger girls spent their money whirling around on this carousel, a popular pastime in Europe.

One ride cost about 20 pfennigs. A girl could easily spend a day's wage in no time at all.

"But there was nowhere to spend the little money we earned," said Lena. "We were permitted to go into Neustadt after work and stay until 9 p. m. in the summer and 8 p. m. in the winter. But we had no ration cards and we could buy nothing. At the camp cafeteria we could buy beer sometimes."

Saw Pole Hanged

A Polish worker said his country men could talk to German girls in town as long as they wore their "P" insignia. But if the police caught them without their "P" they were fined 20 marks.

In the fall of 1943, he said, a Pole was caught with a girl while without his insignia.

"The SS [elite guard] took him to a town near Marburg and hanged him," said the worker. "All Poles in our camp were taken there and compelled to watch. Those who turned their heads away were beaten and clubbed by the SS."

Most of the foreign workers were eager to get home again. But there were many Russians who were not. Some of them realized that because they worked for the Germans, regardless of it being under compulsion, they may not be received with open arms in the soviet union.

PRELATE URGES U.S. SAVE REICH FROM RUSSIANS

Asks Yank Patrols for Nation

BY HENRY WALES

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MUENSTER, Germany, April 5—Count Clemens August Von Galen, archbishop of Muenster, who has defied Hitler ever since the Nazi party assumed power, today urged the United States and Britain to save Germany and the world from bolshevism. He asked that American soldiers be detailed to protect the defenseless, occupied area of Germany from marauding liberated Russian prisoners of war and workers.

The archbishop, who is 67, is living in the Catholic hospital at Sundenhorst, 20 miles south of Muenster.

"I came here after American bombers made a terrific raid on Oct. 10, wrecking the Muenster cathedral and demolishing the archbishop's palace," he said.

Hospital Feeds Russians

The archbishop, who stands 6 feet 6 inches, and is in excellent health, donned black and purple vestments and a purple skull cap to receive The Tribune correspondent in the reception room of the hospital. He apologized that he spoke only German.

As he voiced anxiety over the spread of communism, the hospital staff in a large ward dispensed soup, stew, and bread to hundreds of Russian ex-soldiers and civilians in addition to German, French, Belgian, Dutch, and Yugoslav refugees who are trudging westward as fast as American armored columns occupy Germany.

"I cannot comment on the future of Germany because I do not know what my fatherland will be after the peace comes—furthermore I was born in Germany and remain a German," he said as he stood proudly erect.

"The fatherland existed many centuries and will continue to exist. My country suffered under the tyranny of a dictator as other countries have suffered and now suffer under dictatorships. Perhaps one day even your country may find itself under a dictatorship and then it will realize the difficulties arising therefrom."

Opposed Nazi Acts

The archbishop became an outstanding opponent of Hitler before and during the war when he protested confiscation of church property and interference of religious activities. He combatted Hitler's indoctrination of German children thru the Hitler Youth organization and excoriated Nazi "mercy killings" when the party tried to justify liquidation of the insane, the incurable, and other persons mutilated or physically "unfit to live." He braved arrest when he preached a sermon in 1940, asking, "Does that mean the government will put maimed war veterans to death as useless?"

I asked the prelate if German children were tainted with Nazi indoctrination and he replied:

"Some probably are, but others are not, depending on their parents, their family life, and their upbringing."

Asks Protection from Communism

As he gazed down the corridor, where the Russians were devouring soup and stew brought by nuns, he admonished: "The German people and children must also be protected from communist indoctrination and atheism and the Communist Youth organization, which soviet Russia employs.

"In occupied areas the German police are disbanded and the German people left helpless as hordes of Russian ex-soldiers and workers march thru the country plundering and robbing. The American army should provide military police to preserve order and protect the civilian population it takes over."

Nodding contemplatively, he added: "If the German people are left to starve they may become prey to bolshevik propaganda because communism appeals most to a desperate, famishing, and hopeless people."

IKE PREDICTS NAZI BANDS WILL FIGHT ON UNTIL HUNTED DOWN

Washington, D. C., April 5 (AP)—Gen. Eisenhower, convinced that "a clean cut military surrender" of Germany is not in the cards, foresees a bitter end fight to wipe out bands of Nazi guerrillas.

"A very large number of troops" will be needed to run down and destroy them, he wrote President Roosevelt in a letter released by the White House today.

"We should be prepared," he said, mentioning moves already planned to prevent bands of Nazis from slipping away to the mountains of southern Germany in a desperate determination to string out the agony of war.

Eisenhower himself probably will be the man who decides when organized German resistance is at an end and V-E day has come, the White House said. The general did not say this on his own part, merely mentioning as most likely that "V-E day will come about only by a proclamation on our part."

9TH ARMY BACK UNDER ORDERS OF BRADLEY'S GROUP

PARIS, April 5 (AP)—The American 9th army, which had been under Field Marshal Montgomery's 21st army group command since the Ardennes breakthru in December, today was back under the 12th army group command of Gen. Bradley. Bradley thus became the first general in American history to command four field armies—the 1st, 3d, 9th and 15th—in one group. His command consists of considerably more than 1,000,000 men.

A partial severance of the French 1st army from control of Gen. Devers' 6th army group and supreme headquarters of the allied expeditionary forces also appeared to have developed. It was reported unofficially that an order had been sent thru the French war ministry to Lt. Gen. De Tassigny, French commander, directing him to resume his reports thru army group channels.

Since the French made their own crossing of the Rhine, the general apparently has been reporting directly and perhaps only to the French war ministry. The French war ministry has been issuing its own daily bulletin.

RAINBOW SQUADS BATTLE SNIPERS IN WUERZBURG

WUERZBURG, Germany, April 4 [Delayed] —(AP)—Picked squads of two 42d [Rainbow] division regiments fought their way thru the rubble of 8th century Wuerzburg tonight against continuous sniper fire.

Officers in headquarters on the west bank of the Main river, spurred by the hope of freeing several hundred American and British prisoners reported in the Luitpold hospital on a mountain east of the city, said the fight was going well.

Three battalions of the 222d regiment started crossing the river in assault boats at 4:30 a. m. yesterday.

Rainbow Rangers from the 232d regiment moved in this morning. Prisoners were brought in in batches of 50 and shunted across the river.

Tanks Roll Over Bridge

This afternoon tanks of the 12th armored division, which led the dash up to Marienberg and Hoechberg, west bank suburbs of Wuerzburg, rolled across a bridge built by company A of the 119th engineers.

Most of the area back of the river was a ghostly pile of ruins thru which men stalked cautiously. "They tell us the air force did all this in a 20 minute raid," a soldier said.

The surprise of the crossing must have been complete. Around one corner of a street, Germans' bodies lay in contorted positions. One had been lighting a cigaret when a bullet caught him. Another had been looking at his paybook by candlelight.

Testifying to the viciousness of the fighting, 100 yards farther lay the body of an American medical sergeant, his garb clearly marked by a red cross, with a bullet thru his back.

Old Fortress in Ruins

Across the river on a height stands the ruins of Marienberg fortress. Prisoners lined up on the quay could see a huge "Heil Hitler" sign painted on its walls as they turned to be marched off across a bridge on which were chalked the words, "Believe, fight, win — the fueher lives—at Wuerburg a stand will be made."

One Rainbow Ranger detachment cleared snipers from the 18th century Dom basilica and mopped up in buildings around it. The men killed 15 Germans and captured 15 others in the basilica.

"Three old women were found in a house with snipers," said Lt. John Killoran, Appleton, Wis. "We don't know whether they have been sniping themselves. They might have been carrying ammunition. Anyway, we brought them out."

Killoran said that up to 6 p. m. only two casualties had been reported in his battalion as the men moved warily from house to house.

10 YANK NURSES SEIZED BY NAZIS RETURN IN HUFF

Ambush? Pooh! But That Paris Finery Is Gone

WITH THE U. S. 4TH ARMORED DIVISION, April 5 (AP)—Getting ambushed was not what bothered the 10 American nurses so much—it was losing their keepsakes and their Paris finery.

They were members of a hospital unit that was overrun and cut off by German SS [Elite guard] troops in a column 25 miles north of Frankfurt last Sunday. Their outfit, attached to the 4th armored division, was held by the Germans until it was liberated at 6:30 p. m. the same day by American tanks.

"The first thing we knew there was a lot of shooting and we hit the ditch," said Lt. Helen Cosma of Toledo, O. "We did not lose any time."

End of a New Nightgown

"After a while," said Lt. Lillian Clark, Mineral Wells, Tex., "I asked my driver if it was o. k. to get up. He looked around and said, 'Yes, it's all over now. The Germans got us.' The Germans then took everything we had. What made me the maddest was the loss of a new nightgown I'd bought in Paris and never worn."

Lt. Marie Janes, South Boston, Mass., said she lost not only the things she bought in Paris, but also her prized wedding pictures. She had been married in France to Capt. Ralph Janes, Albert Lea, Minn., now an air corps instructor at Stockton field, Cal.

"Those Germans scattered everything from hell to here," added the pint sized and fiery Lt. Janes.

Lt. Dorothy Pratt, Salem, Mass., brushed aside the German who poked a gun in her face, and retrieved her musette bag, a small canvas sack such as every French soldier carried in World War I. It was the only possession salvaged by any of the nurses.

"I pointed businesslike at my Red Cross brassard and told him he couldn't do that to me," Lt. Pratt said.

Map Reaches a Haven

Lt. Mildred Barnett, Galveston, Tex., said:

"They got everything but my silk map, the kind the paratroopers use, which is my prize war trophy. I saved it by stuffing it in my bosom."

The Germans told the nurses they were not captives but were being held in custody until a tactical situation cleared, said Lt. Rosalou Freeland, Washington, D. C., adding, "but that didn't sound convincing."

"What really burned us up," said Lt. Lula Howard, Hollis, Okla., with a laugh, "was the way the G. Is who were captured with us snickered and passed snide remarks at our kitchen policing. Our kitchen staff was cut off and somebody had to cook, so we turned to."

The voluntary kitchen help included Lt. Lola Dickenson, Montgomery, Ala., and Lt. Marjorie Rice [state not given], who peeled potatoes and made soup for everybody.

Half of a Spearhead Caught

The most chagrined individual in the column was Lt. Col. Harold Cohen, Spartanburg, S. C., who is half of the 4th armored's spearheading team of Abrams and Cohen.

"I'd been to the rear for treatment of a minor ailment and was riding in the column after nine months of raising hell at the front in tanks and reconnaissance cars," Cohen said. "They knew who they had. When the German general commanding the SS outfit came up he said, 'Ah, how glad we are to see YOU.' I gulped and said to myself, 'Cohen, you've had it.' Then he asked, 'How's your friend, Abrams, doing?' I told him Abrams [Col. Creighton Abrams, West Newton, Mass.] was doing all right. I thought to myself the Germans knew better than I how he was doing."

Saved by Ambulance Dash

After marching the hospital staff 2½ miles to the next town, the Germans permitted the Americans to set up a hospital at which both American and German wounded were treated.

A German SS general told the Americans they could minister to all the wounded "except the American blacks." The Yanks turned down the proposition.

The Americans were liberated when Lt. Harms [no first name given], a medical administrative officer from Sibley, Ia.; Pvt. Frank C. Digman, Belleyville, Ill., and another Yank drove an ambulance thru the German line and guided tanks to the rescue.

Shell Hits 25 Yards Away —Nazi Bridge Goes Down

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

WITH THE U. S. 7TH ARMY, Germany, April 5—Lieutenants Lincoln E. Siler of Wichita, Kas., and Lester F. Faber of Remsen, Ia., had a "cub's-eye" view of the unorthodox destruction of an enemy bridge across a small stream. From their little observation plane they directed artillery fire on the target. The second shell hit about 25 yards from the span, but to the amazement of the airmen the bridge disappeared in smoke and debris. It had been wired for demolition and the shell had set off the charge.

BELIEVE GREEN, NERVOUS TROOPS SHOT GEN. ROSE

Codes Found Intact in Leader's Jeep

BY JOHN THOMPSON

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

WITH THE U. S. 1ST ARMY, Germany, April 5—Printed reports appearing in today's army newspaper that various senators had demanded a war department investigation of the death of Maj. Gen. Maurice Rose who was shot and killed while surrendering to a Tiger [Mark VI.] tank crew, served to emphasize the gulf existing between the soldier and the home front.

Tankers of Rose's 3d armored division and others who knew the brilliant young general are still shocked by his death. But they know that Rose's death was a battlefield accident and not another case of Nazi brutality.

In Heat of Battle

Had it been a case of deliberate murder of American prisoners as happened near Malmedy during the Ardennes break-thru, correspondents would have reported that fact. But it was one of those things which can happen in the heat of battle, and which have happened before to surrendering Germans or Americans.

Maj. Robert Bellinger, the general's senior aide, who escaped with others of Rose's party, believes that the German tankers were green troops and nervous.

None of Codes Taken

In the few seconds of action in front of the Tiger tank it appeared to Bellenger as if the tanker fired his machine pistol in the mistaken belief that Rose was reaching for his pistol instead of trying to lift the holster over his head as he was doing when killed.

The tankers were so inexperienced, said Bellenger, that after he and the others returned the tankers had not searched Rose's jeep or his armored car. Both were recovered intact and in them were our secret codes, our operational maps, and other secret documents which would have been of great value to the enemy. Had the Germans been seasoned troops they undoubtedly would have recognized Rose by the two stars on his helmet as a valuable war prize. Americans believe the tank crew was composed of Germans sent into battle from a training school.

YANK GENERAL SHOT DOWN IN ITALY; MISSING

WITH THE 5TH ARMY IN ITALY, March 19 [Delayed by censor]—(AP)—Brig. Gen. Gustav J. Braun, assistant division commander of the veteran 34th infantry division, has been missing in action since being shot down in a small observation plane over the mountainous No Man's land south of Bologna on March 17. He was on an inspection flight over the front lines at the time.

The general and his pilot were flying at about 400 foot altitude when doughboys saw enemy anti-aircraft guns open fire. Suddenly the plane headed downward between the lines and smoke was seen pouring out.

Braun, 50, had been assistant commander of the 34th division only a few months.

CLAIMS GOERING IS FORGOTTEN MAN IN GERMANY

BY GODFREY ANDERSON

[Associated Press war correspondent, who was captured in North Africa in 1941 and freed last week.]

PARIS, April 5 (AP).—A growing friendliness of many German civilians toward prisoners and foreign workers has become noticeable as the war draws toward a close. It obviously is worrying Nazi leaders and has caused Propaganda Minister Goebbels to start a new press campaign reminding Germans not to forget who is "top dog."

His warning that the German population would become hostile to prisoners as a result of allied bombings has been completely falsified by events.

Once, during a parole walk from the prison camp at Hadamar, I met a German woman, who cried, "I thought you were an American paratrooper come at last!"

Himmler Runs Country

Other Germans used to give us apples. All prisoner walks eventually were stopped.

It is only fear of the Gestapo that stopped some Germans from being still friendlier than they were. Himmler, the most feared man in the reich, and his Gestapo run the whole country now.

Hitler is generally regarded as a sick man. Many believe he was killed or at least seriously incapacitated by the bombing plot of last July.

Goebbels is commanding less and less support. Goering, utterly discredited by the allied bombings and destruction of his air force, is seldom heard about at all. Because he once said that if German cities ever were bombed you could call him Meyer, the Hermann Goering panzer grenadier division now openly calls itself the "Hermann Meyer's division." A member of the division told me that.

Traffic Moves at Night

Despite all efforts, the general situation has been breaking into chaos in recent weeks. Over wide areas traffic is able to move only at night because of bombings. Grave shortages threaten the big cities. In some there is no bread.

Country districts usually are better off, but even there wrecked trains often are looted despite the death penalty.

I saw one whole village in action like a colony of ants rushing to and from the wrecked freight cars of a train near Giessen, carrying home cases of macaroni and wine until there was nothing left.

Death penalties were decreed for almost everything from listening to British broadcasts to undermining morale by consorting with foreign workers. Finally, there was a kind of blanket coverage for other crimes which were treated as actions detrimental to the German reich and people. Newspapers daily contain the names of those executed under this decree, often including women.

In the last weeks even party officials were sentenced. Several Nazi mayors were shot or hanged before their own offices for deserting posts without orders.

ARMY'S CASUALTIES AT 798,383 MARK; NAVY'S TOTAL 94,526

Washington, D. C., April 5 (AP)—Army and navy casualties since the beginning of the war have reached 892,909, War Secretary Stimson today reported.

Army losses total 798,383 while the navy's total 94,526, over-all an increase of 20,047 since last week's announcement.

Stimson said the army casualty figures reflected fighting up to the early part of March.

Army casualties, as compared with last week, are: Killed 156,471 and 153,791; wounded 486,929 and 473,669; missing 88,755 and 86,355; prisoners 66,228 and 66,228.

Similar figures for the navy: Killed 36,649 and 35,750; wounded 42,988 and 42,302; missing 10,623 and 10,500; prisoners 4,266 and 4,267.

Stimson today estimated Japanese casualties in the Philippines at more than 311,000, including 187,799 counted dead, against total United States casualties of 36,981, including 8,138 killed.

BUILDERS OFFER SLUM PLAN FREE OF BLIND ALLEYS

Private Enterprise Held Answer to Problem

Slum Bills Pass

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Springfield, Ill., April 5—By a vote of 47 to 0, the senate today passed five companion bills in the Chicago slum clearance series. Sen. Daley [D., Chicago], a sponsor of the measures, was the only speaker. Together with the key housing bill, which was passed yesterday, these bills are scheduled to clear the house and be sent to the governor next week. They are part of the bipartisan legislative program of Gov. Green and Mayor Kelly for the Chicago area.

BY LEWIS HUNT

The notion that families now living in blighted districts must be rehoused at public expense in the same areas under slum clearance and rebuilding programs such as the one now in the legislature, sponsored by Mayor Kelly and Gov. Green was disputed yesterday by real estate men and builders. They said that private initiative, when war time restrictions are lifted, can develop the cleared districts for the best use of each neighborhood and at the same time can furnish housing for many slum dwellers in more desirable surroundings.

Legislation backed by the mayor and the governor provides for condemnation of slum property and for tax exemption and public funds to subsidize housing projects. Spokesmen for private enterprise said these terms create the impression that public housing is the only solution for all who happen to live in neighborhoods designated as slums.

Savings for Taxpayers

Instead, the developers assert, there are many families living in slums for lack of other shelter who are eager and financially able to improve their housing; there is land available in outlying city sections and suburban districts, and the private builders say they can build, at a profit, at less than the cost to the taxpayers of public housing projects.

Joseph E. Merrion, president of the National Association of Home Builders of the United States, said that one comparison of current costs was afforded by the Chicago housing authority's Altgeld project on 130th st., which is almost finished and occupied, and a private operation on 95th st. Both are of the "row house" type.

CHA said the cost of an Altgeld dwelling unit was $6,200, including its share of the cost of community recreational facilities. Merrion said the private operator sold his units for $6,000, some for a little less, and that his figure included a profit.

Cost by Room Compared

Cost by the room in Chicago housing projects that included slum clearance ranged from $1,826 in the Jane Addams Houses, whose site cost $1.42 a square foot, to $1,215 for the Ida B. Wells Homes, for which the WPA bought and cleared the land.

Private operators, including himself, are putting up single dwellings under war housing priority to sell at $1,200 a room, including the cost of the lot and a margin of profit, said Merrion. The selling price is limited to $6,000. Some have been sold for a little less, Merrion said, and some rent for $50 a month.

Merrion has erected 80 houses of this type just south of Chicago airport. They are of brick construction, cover an area of 1,000 square feet on a lot 40 by 125 feet, have full basement, tile floors in the bath room, and built-in cabinets in the kitchen.

Ground Cost Disclosed

Ground costs in slum areas when housing sites are assembled by condemnation and the old buildings cleared away, and the cost of living quarters in multiple unit public projects are shown by the following figures furnished by the Chicago housing authority:

Project—	Unit cost	Rm. cost	Land cost sq. foot
Jane Addams	$6,845	$1,826	$1.42
Ida B. Wells	5,045	1,215	.37
Robert B. Brooks	5,691	1,287	.83
Frances Cabrini	9,338	1,436	1.36

The following projects were not classed as slum clearance jobs:

Project—	Unit cost	Rm. cost	Land cost sq. foot
Julia C. Lathrop	$5,645	$1,505	$0.39
Trumbull Park	5,736	1,529	.08
Lawndale Gardens	5,353	1,112	.29

"Public agencies have built 7,000 dwelling units in Chicago and private enterprise has built a million," said Merrion. "There is no disagreement on getting rid of the slums. We all want that. It is a big job and it will require united effort. We must see it on a city-wide scale.

"Able to Meet Demand."

"In seven years before the depression private industry put up 40,000 dwelling units a year. We could put up 50 per cent more. In five years we could replace the 225,000 substandard dwellings if that were necessary. If we permit the natural laws of supply and demand to operate, private builders, together with our supply of housing, can meet the demand.

"We don't have to rebuild the slums all at once, even if it was possible."

High land costs in slum clearance projects will mean that each neighborhood will be put to its "highest and best" use if a natural course of development is followed, Merrion said.

Rebuilding the slums, when they have been cleared, is necessary to avoid losing so much taxable property that the load would be unbearable for other taxpayers, Merrion said. That situation would result also, he asserted, if the cleared areas were filled with tax exempt public housing.

Another reason why the 22 square miles of blighted area must contain taxpaying property, including residential types, of various rental grades, was given by J. Soule Warterfield, former president of the Chicago Real Estate board, who said that if a suggestion to make the land into parks was followed "every public utility would risk going broke."

NEWEST FIGHTER BOMBER A REAL BOLT FROM BLUE

Has 2,000 Mile Range and 450 Mile Speed

Washington, D. C., April 5 [Special]—A new model Thunderbolt plane, capable of flying more than 2,000 miles and said by an air forces spokesman to be the longest range fighter plane in the American air forces, is in production, the war department disclosed today.

The new Thunderbolt, known as the P-47N, obviously will play an important role in the air war against Japan, where B-29 Super Fortresses as yet must fly relatively long distances to hit the empire and thus will require long range fighters if they are to receive cover. The war department said it can be used as "an escort plane on long range bombing missions."

Speed Over 450 M. P. H.

The P-47N, which is both a fighter and a fighter-bomber, has a combat radius of more than 1,000 miles, meaning a comfortable round trip range of more than double that distance, and a speed exceeding 450 miles an hour.

It was developed by Republic Aviation corporation and the air technical service command, and the plans were off the drawing board in the record time of 56 days, four days ahead of schedule, the war department stated.

The new model is powered by a 2,100 horsepower Pratt and Whitney engine—100 horsepower more than the old Thunderbolt. It also has a larger, more efficient General Electric super-charger, which, combined with the new engine, gives it greater speed at higher altitudes.

Increase Gas Supply

To develop the added combat range of the plane, engineers increased the internal gas supply by redesigning the wing section, increasing the span by 18 inches, and adding 22 square feet more area. They also added eight gas tanks, nearly doubling the internal fuel capacity.

In appearance the new plane is nearly identical with the former model. The most noticeable difference is the squared off wing tip.

The latest Thunderbolt is equipped with a compensating gunsight, eight .50 caliber machine guns, and carries 10 5 inch high velocity rockets, and two 500 pound bombs. Fully loaded, it weighs approximately 20,000 pounds.

Alcan Highway Aid Talks to Engineers on April 19

Col. Harry A. Montgomery, division engineer of the Great Lakes division, United States army engineers, who played an important part in the construction of the Alcan highway, will discuss that project before the Chicago post, Society of American Military Engineers, at its monthly luncheon meeting April 19, in the Engineers' club, 314 Federal st. Col. Montgomery has made many contributions to the application of engineering to modern warfare.

GOVERNOR GETS CHICAGO TRANSIT AUTHORITY BILLS

BY ROBERT HOWARD

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Springfield, Ill., April 5—Gov. Green said today that by the first part of next week he expects to sign into law the emergency Kelly-Green bills for public ownership of the metropolitan Chicago traction system, which were passed by the house today.

"I presume that I will have further conferences with Mayor Kelly on traction, port authority, and perhaps other matters," the governor said at his press conference. Housing bills, agreed upon by the two political rivals, are being rushed thru the legislature and plans are being drafted for a Chicago port authority.

Final passage in the house came on a 139 to 8 roll call during which several representatives made speeches questioning the bills but in most cases ended up by voting for the bipartisan agreement sponsored by the Republican governor and Mayor Kelly, the No. 1 Democrat in Illinois.

Plan June 4 Referendum

In Chicago plans were being rushed to put the proposition of creating a metropolitan transit authority on the June 4 ballot.

Four members of the authority would be appointed by the mayor and three by the governor. It would operate the Chicago street car and elevated systems and have authority to take over the motor coach company.

Also to be obtained before the public ownership plan can be made effective is the approval of Federal Judge Igoe, in whose court the street car and elevated lines are in bankruptcy. Sponsors of the plan hope that the lines can be purchased for 87 million dollars. The transit body would have authority to sell revenue bonds to raise funds for new equipment and extensions of lines.

The bills passed were those introduced by the senate floor leaders, Senators Daley [D., Chicago] and Laughlin [R., Freeport].

Crowley Denounces Plan

Rep. Crowley [R., Peoria] furnished the high point of the house debate. He started his oration in a booming voice from his back row seat by calling the traction settlement "the most brazen steal that I know of." He charged that Gov. Green secretly believes the traction settlement will not work. He denounced Mayor Kelly and tossed in some remarks about Kansas City in the Pendergast era. Then he voted for the bills.

Rep. Burnsmier [R., Mason City] also objected to the bills. He argued that public ownership would "destroy free enterprise, private ownership, and the American form of government."

Burnsmier voted against the bills, as did seven other downstate Republicans. They were Jones [Tuscola], Laufer [Hampshire], Peel [Galesburg], Samford [Fairfield], Schaumleffel [Monmouth], Searle [Rock Island], and Stanley [Crossville].

It was from her home in Paris, where she had installed the French staff, that the radio communication came last Aug. 19 to start resistance in the city. She is in this country on special duty with the French ministry of information and is observing women's organizations here, as French women will vote for the first time April 26.

THEATER OWNER ENDS DEFIANCE OF CURFEW BAN

Toledo, O., April 6 [Friday]—(AP)—Jack O'Connell, manager of the Loop theater, early today had ended his 17 day defiance of the national amusement curfew by closing his theater at midnight.

The theater owner announced henceforth he would close with other places at midnight following a meeting with officials of the AFL-Alliance of Theafrical Stage Employes and Motion Picture Operators. He declined further comment.

Common Pleas Judge Harvey G. Straub yesterday turned down O'Connell's application for continuance of a temporary injunction restraining the union from interfering with the operaton of the theater after midnight.

The Loop case will be reviewed by a regional war man power commission labor management panel Saturday in Cleveland.

Yesterday a union projection machine operator quit at midnight in spite of the temporary injunction obtained by O'Connell from the court. The show went on, however, when the theater owner's wife took over the operation of the projection machine until the usual closing hour at 5 a. m.

SLUM CLEARING PLAN INDORSED BY CITY GROUP

Edwin R. Embree, chairman of the mayor's committee on race relations, announced yesterday that the committee has approved Mayor Kelly's slum clearance program calling for passage of a bond issue to rebuild blighted areas of the city.

The committee also reported that it had been able to save from eviction 19 Negro families who were about to be moved as "squatters" from their homes in the Mecca building, E. 34th and State sts.

The property, owned by the Illinois Institute of Technology, has been condemned by the city, but the families had settled in some of the vacant rooms because they had no other place to live.

YUGOSLAVS LEAN TO BIGGER STATE BUSINESS ROLE

Monopoly of Industries and Mining Expected

BY CLAY GOWRAN
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia, April 5—Government ownership and operation of industry and services in Yugoslavia, already established on a large scale before war came in 1941, undoubtedly will be extended greatly in the post-war period under the national liberation movement inspired by Marshal Tito.

The former university professor who now is secretary of the Partisan government made this statement to me a few days ago:

"Before the war the old Yugoslav government operated the railways, postal and telegraph systems, river navigation companies, the salt and tobacco industries, and the radio system, and had extended government control to part of the coal and steel industries. Now, government ownership will grow bigger."

UNRRA to Help

It seems highly probable that all, or nearly all, of the large industries and mining will be brought into the state monopoly. With practically every Yugoslav penniless after four years of warfare, the government is the only agency which can obtain the necessary credit to finance and operate such industries. The help to be given by the united nations relief and rehabilitation administration which will begin work in Yugoslavia April 15, will aid the government in this respect.

Here is the status of Yugoslav industry today:

1. Plants whose owners collaborated openly with the Germans and who fled with the Nazi army have been confiscated and will remain state property.

2. Plants owned by individuals whose trials on charges of collaboration are pending are under temporary sequestration until their fate is decided. Many important private plants are in this category.

3. Plants owned by foreigners of the allied nations who now are absent also are under temporary sequestration.

4. Private plants still in the hands of Yugoslavs whose records are clean will be allowed to operate them if they are financially able.

Extent Unpredictable

Just how far the government will go toward state ownership is unpredictable. Tito has said that every aid will be given to private industry because, he said, reconstruction without private industry is unthinkable. On the other hand, Edward Kardlj, a vice premier and leading Partisan spokesman, said in a radio speech:

"To let private enterprise be stronger economically than the state would be to succumb to the old Yugoslav reactionaries and to lose our gains won in the field of political battle."

Another observer held that the government was doing little to aid private industry. Crippled by the war and bankrupt, such industries are falling toward state control, he asserted.

Grateful to Russians

"The tendency seems to be that the government will try to take over all main industries permanently, leaving only the small ones to private enterprise," he said. He is probably right.

Tito, who rose from the worker class, is a stanch Communist, and the Communist party is the strongest and best organized in the Yugoslav popular front. Also the Partisans are exceedingly grateful for the help the Russian army has given them, and greatly admire the soviet economy. It seems likely that there will be much patterning after the Russian system.

The government is now organizing and financing coöperatives on a broad scale. They operate exactly as do those in the United States, except that they are owned by the government. At the moment they are primarily confined to food. In February coöperatives in Belgrade sold potatoes at 30 dinars a kilogram while they were 100 dinars in private stores.

Gift of Mexico

Mayor Kelly yesterday was presented with two Mexican serapes to commemorate the completion of the first direct flight from Mexico City to Chicago by the Aerovias Braniff airlines. The serapes, presented by Mario Lesso, Mexican consul in Chicago, were a gift from Senor Xavier Rojo Gomez, head of the Mexican federal district. The first direct commercial flight between the two cities was completed yesterday morning.

FAKE RED STAMP DEPOSIT LINKED TO PACKING FIRM

Charges were made yesterday before Hearing Commissioner Kenneth Lemmer of the office of price administration that 983 red ration stamps allegedly deposited in a suburban bank by the Marhoefer Packing company, 820 Fulton st., matched with 332,000 bogus stamps recently seized and had come from the same press. The OPA is seeking a suspension against the company on charges of price violations, keeping false records, and selling without points.

The 332,000 stamps mentioned at the hearing were confiscated Jan. 24 with the arrest of Gaetano [Guy] Polito and his wife, who now are awaiting trial.

Noel Foss, an OPA agent, said that the 983 questioned stamps were in an envelope containing stamps turned in to the Marhoefer company by William Fishman, 5570 Congress st., a butcher. Fishman testified his stamps came from customers. Other testimony showed the envelope had been handled by other persons before the fraudulent stamps were discovered. Morris Felkson, a butcher at 222 E. 47th st., testified that 10,000 points disappeared from his office while Nate Blum, a former Marhoefer salesman, was there, and that he forced Blum to give him 5,980 points in loose stamps.

'GATEWAY' PLAN TO AMEND STATE LAW INTRODUCED

BY GEORGE TAGGE
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Springfield, Ill., April 5—Calculated to make the course of the constitutional convention movement more difficult, a resolution for a "gateway amendment" to the basic law of 1870 was introduced in the house today by Representatives Lee [R., Chicago], David Hunter [R., Rockford], and Edwards [D., Danville].

Even without this maneuver, reported to be the handiwork of R. G. Soderstrom, president of the Illinois State Federation of Labor, the constitutional convention proposal would face tough going. Road blocks have been set up in the form of widespread downstate opposition against anything that might shift the balance of legislative power from downstate to Cook county.

Fear Redistricting

Downstaters fear that rewriting of the constitution would produce a reapportionment of the state's senatorial and congressional districts. There has been no redistricting to meet population changes since 1901.

The "gateway amendment" has been considered in nearly every legislative session. It contemplates a change in the constitution to permit submission of three amendments instead of one at a single election.

It is called the "gateway amendment" because it would open the gate, figuratively speaking, to easier amendment of the constitution.

Under the Lee-Edwards-Hunter resolution, the "gateway amendment" could be adopted by two-thirds of those voting upon the proposition at the November, 1946, election. But the constitution states that an amendment must be approved by "a majority of the electors voting at said election."

May Succeed This Year

The "gateway" plan may have greater chance of success this season than at most others because some opponents of a constitutional convention may vote for "gateway" as part of a deal to defeat "con con."

Rep. Stransky [R., Savanna], chairman of the house executive committee, said that opponents of "con con" will be heard in the house chamber next Tuesday.

STATE SENATE VOTES BAN ON DYED CHICKS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Springfield, Ill., April 5—Final passage of the Keller bill to halt the trade in dyed chicks and other baby fowl as pets was voted by the senate today, 46 to 0. The Chicago city council has attempted to stop the practice by ordinance.

"This has become more than a matter of obvious cruelty to helpless bits of life," said Sen. Paddock [R., Round Lake], who handled the measure in the senate for the sponsor, Rep. Keller [R., Waukegan]. "With this country engulfed in a critical food shortage, and housewives often unable to buy chickens for the family table, it is almost criminal to permit the sale of baby fowl as pets for children who will ignorantly cause their death."

Divorces Fighter

MRS. FRANCES ANGELUCCI

Mrs. Frances Angelucci, 26, of 1419 E. 55th st., yesterday won a divorce and a $100 a month allotment from Pvt. Louis Angelucci, former middleweight prize fighter who is now in the marines at Parris Island, N. C.

In response to questioning before Circuit Judge Michael Feinberg by her attorneys, Joseph H. and Norman Becker, Mrs. Angelucci asserted that her husband frequently exercised his fistic prowess upon her after spending a night out with "the boys."

A suggestion by the court that she try a reconciliation was declined. The couple had been reconciled five times, she said, but none of them took. The court awarded Mrs. Angelucci, who charged her husband with cruelty, custody of their two children, Louis Jr., 4, and Diane, 1.

QUIZ LABRIOLA'S PAL ON HIS ALIBI IN GALVIN CASE

James Weinberg, 44, of 853 Agatite av., took and passed a lie detector test yesterday on his story offering an alibi for his pal, Paul [Angie] Labriola, ex-convict, who is being sought for questioning about the Galvin murder case. The victims, Mrs. Lillian Galvin, wife of a radio manufacturer, and her maid, Edna Sibilski, were slain in their Evanston home Oct. 22, 1942; the killers stole $28,000 in gems.

Mrs. Florence Jackson Barad, whose hoodlum husband, Maurice Barad, was assassinated March 29 in Du Page county, has named Labriola as one of the slayers and has sought to involve him in the Galvin crime.

Weinberg declared that he, his wife, and Labriola were in California on the day of the shooting, and that Labriola was arrested after a fight the day before. San Diego police records confirmed the arrest. Police, however, will investigate Labriola's stay on the west coast.

PROPOSE $2,500 INCREASE IN PAY OF LEGISLATORS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Springfield, Ill., April 5—Bills to increase the biennial pay of state legislators from $5,000 to $7,500 were introduced in both houses today.

A quick look at the pay increase bill indicated that it would pass, at least in the house. The house bill had 79 sponsors, headed by Rep. Euzzino [D., Chicago] and needs only 77 votes to go to the senate. Eight Chicago Democrats, headed by Sen. Libonati, introduced the pay bill in the senate, where 26 votes are necessary for passage.

In 1937 legislative salaries were increased from $3,500 to $5,000 for the two year period. If Euzzino's bill passes, the increased pay cannot be drawn by present assemblymen until they have been reëlected.

Mileage Fee Doubled

Mileage for legislators on their weekly trips to Springfield would be increased from 5 to 10 cents a mile under another Euzzino et al bill.

Salaries of elective state officials would be increased by other new bills in both houses. The proposed scales: governor, increased from $12,000 to $18,000 a year; lieutenant governor, $5,000 to $10,000; secretary of state, auditor, treasurer, attorney general, and superintendent of public instruction, $9,000 to $12,000 each, and Supreme court clerk, $7,500 to $9,000.

The secretary of the legislative reference bureau, who drafts bills, would be boosted to $7,500.

Gov. Green said the pay increase bills were not sponsored by his administration.

Vote Judicial Pay Boosts

Only two negative votes—Senators Flagg [R., Moro] and Baker [R., Davis Junction]—were cast as the senate passed and sent to the house three bills in a long series to increase the salaries of judges. Circuit judges thruout the state and Superior court judges in Chicago would get $2,000 a year increases under the bills. They now get $8,000 downstate and $15,000 in Cook county.

Another bill would boost the pay of downstate County judges on a sliding scale, depending on population. The smallest increase would be from $1,800 to $2,400 and the largest from $6,000 to $8,000.

Gov. Green signed into law an emergency bill by Sen. Connors [D., Chicago] permitting salaries of Municipal court deputy bailiffs and clerks to be increased from $2,500 to not more than $3,500 a year, if approved by referendum. The governor also approved a $104,000 appropriation for the operation of veterans' rehabilitation centers.

CRUISER CHICAGO TO GET OVERSEAS TRIBUNE AT SEA

Unique in Navy History, Captain Believes

BY FRANK CIPRIANI

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

(Picture on back page)

AT SEA ABOARD THE NEW U. S. CRUISER CHICAGO [Delayed] —This great ship, nicknamed the "Big Shot," and now well along on a shakedown cruise in foreign waters, had happy news today. She will receive shortly, and thereafter regularly, the weekly Overseas Edition of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

Capt. Richard Renwick Hartung welcomes it with open enthusiasm, similarly with officers and men down the line.

"THE TRIBUNE'S Overseas Edition will become a very valuable asset of this ship," said Capt. Hartung, an Annapolis graduate, veteran of World War I, and with extensive battle service in this war. "So far as my experience goes, and it is considerable, this is unique in the annals of naval ships; and it is something very much to be desired.

"We do get, of course, daily, effective coverage of important world news, but so far as my knowledge extends, we have never had consolidated news — pictures, fiction, sports, columns, and such varied assortment of newspaper features.

Thanks The Tribune

"This is a very splendid thing, and will become more so in view of our prospects of service beyond the usual range of radio. I am very happy about it, and I say that with genuine enthusiasm. For my men and myself, I thank THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE."

Among the happiest of the crew were the ship's two Hoosier printers, Oscar H. McDermott of Alexandria, a former printer of the Anderson, Ind., Herald, and Charles V. Creek, who formerly printed his own hometown paper, the Lynn Herald of Lynn, Ind. Their department head is Ensign John Borek of Dubuque, Ia., who also shared their elation.

They operate a Davidson machine into which the plates for the Overseas Tribune fit perfectly. THE TRIBUNE also will supply the right size paper and other materials. All the ship's printers will need do is to set the plates, and to grind out any specified number of copies.

Several sample copies, sent by A. M. Kennedy, Sunday editor of THE TRIBUNE, to Capt. Hartung, were distributed. Chicago boys, of course, were swarming around each copy. Among those noted were Ernest Schalansky, 3321 Aberdeen st.; Al J. Malkowski, 2019 N. Damen av., Lee L. Pallardy, 2123 W. 107th st.; John McCool, 5602 Union av.; M. F. Cobb, 3759 Wilton st.; Frank J. Clarke, 1614 Rascher av.; Victor Weimer, 2521 Greenview av.; Rudolph H. Beizl, 4738 S. Komensky av.; Joseph P. Felonk, 4585 S. Honore st., and William L. Panavas, 4411 S. Wood st.

Also from Chicagoland

N. R. Hunt, Madison, Wis.; S. J. Vance, 822 Park av., Wilmette; Jack Q. Hendron, 47 W. 14th pl., Chicago Heights; James F. Kelly, 1604 N. Newcastle av., Chicago; H. W. Werner, 1234 Loyola av., Chicago.

A. S. Murphy, 444 State st., Calumet City; Leonard Lick, 6030 Byron st., Chicago; Robert G. Bonshire, formerly of Chicago, now of Kent City, Mich.; George L. Wagner, 816 Lincoln av., Bedford, Ind.; Chester Pieczkiewicz, 2440 W. 25th st., Chicago; George N. Olsen, 2325 N. Sawyer av., Chicago.

Edwin W. Evashenk, 1407 S. California av., Chicago; J. J. Konefall, 3814 Main st., East Chicago, Ind.; Miles S. Lowy, 1720 W. 5th av., Gary, Ind.; Michael W. Osesek, 941 W. 32d pl.; James Shigley, 7432 Dante av.; Richard J. Eppelheimer, 109 S. California av.; Roy Kaspar, 1453 S. Kedvale av., and Melvin H. Ekster, 944 W. 73d st., all of Chicago.

DIM-OUT SAVING OF COAL 11,600 TONS IN MARCH

Dim-outs saved 11,600 tons of coal in Chicago and Illinois in March, its second month, the Commonwealth Edison group of companies estimated yesterday. Restrictions on electricity for outdoor advertising, decorative lighting, and show windows were effective Feb. 1.

John Duveen, war production board regional director, said the estimate confirmed the first month's indication of an annual fuel saving of 130,000 tons of coal. This, he added, is 33⅓ per cent greater than WPB officials had expected. He praised local government officials.

Decrease in traffic accidents was reported by City Traffic Engineer Sorenson. Records of night accidents from March 5 to 14 inclusive, compared with 1944, show fatalities reduced from 6 to 3, nonfatal accidents from 169 to 152, and accidents involving property damage from 173 to 166.

SPARE TIRE AND WHEEL STOLEN. Sidney Saltz, 7636 Essex av., yesterday reported the theft of a spare tire and wheel from the trunk of his automobile.

THE QUESTION

What has been your most interesting or amusing experience as a stewardess?

WHERE ASKED

Chicago airport.

THE ANSWERS

Florence Moore, United Air Lines, 6204 S. Troy st.—A marine passenger returning home from the South Pacific was trimming his new mustache. "Do you think your mother will like that?" I questioned. "Do you like it?" he asked. "No, I don't like mustaches," I answered. He left his seat and returned minus the mustache.

Mary Margaret Lively, United, 6202 S. Troy st.—A day that stands out in my mind is last Christmas. The passengers, pilots, and I all longed to be home. To make up for it we had a Christmas party on the plane . . . sang carols and told stories. One of the fellows produced a piece of mistletoe and hung it over the door.

Mildred Wills, TWA, 1034 Lake st., Oak Park—On one flight I had a prominent radio announcer as a passenger. He asked me if I'd like to visit a radio station. Of course I said yes. He took me thru the control rooms, introduced me to many important radio people, and took me to many programs that were not open to the public.

Lyn Stauffer, United, 6202 S. Troy st.—We were carrying 17 soldiers on our plane. En route we had a four hour stopover because of bad weather. The soldiers took me to the canteen. They were swell boys and I had such a good time. Imagine having 17 men as an escort. The local girls really stared.

Rita Ward, Chicago and Southern, St. Louis, Mo.—In these war times every flight is thrilling and interesting. So many boys have been away from their families for so long and each is bubbling with anxiety. They can't get home soon enough. I think I'm as excited as they when I see them meet their families at the gate.

Betty Roberts, Braniff, Dallas, Tex.—Each trip to me is fascinating. One day I had Cobina Wright Jr., glamor girl film actress, as a passenger. It was a pleasant surprise to all the passengers and to me. She was as dazzlingly beautiful as all her pictures and caused a sensation wherever we landed.

CHAPLIN INSISTS ON JURY TRIAL IN PATERNITY SUIT

Los Angeles, Cal., April 5 (AP)—Charlie Chaplin announced thru his counsel in court today that he wants the paternity suit brought against him by Joan Berry tried by a jury.

Selection of a jury proceeded immediately. A panel of 10 women and two men was called to the jury box for examination by attorneys for both sides.

Miss Berry's attorneys, in an unexpected move, declared yesterday they were willing to dispense with a jury, but Chaplin's lawyer, Charles Millikan, said he wished to confer with his client before accepting or rejecting the proposal.

The law permits Chaplin to demand a jury trial of the civil action.

A jury in the first trial disagreed last January.

Two Midwest Officers Freed by Russian Push

Washington, D. C., April 5 (AP)—The war department disclosed today that 2d Lt. Richard A. Alberts, Saginaw, Mich., and 2d Lt. Wilbur B. Sharpe, Lebanon, Ind., had been freed from German captivity by the Russian advance.

A HAPPY HUNCH LETS G. I.'S WIFE KNOW HE'S SAFE

Mrs. Viola Anderson of 5620 Newport av. had another hunch yesterday. She thought she would near from her husband. Pvt. Theodore, because it was his 26th birthday. The premonition was correct. She received a V-mail letter announcing his liberation from German captivity.

"My hunches are getting better all the time," Mrs. Anderson commented happily. Between hunches and correspondence, there isn't much happening to her husband over in Europe that she doesn't know about quickly.

Dream Also Confirmed

On Jan. 21 Mrs. Anderson dreamed he had been wounded and visioned two men helping him. "They were so kind, I knew they couldn't be Germans," she said. It wasn't until Jan. 23 that she was notified her husband was missing, but subsequently the dream was confirmed.

Mrs. Anderson wrote to Brig. Gen. Thomas Herren of the 70th division, her husband's, when she saw his name in a dispatch from Seymour Korman, a Tribune war correspondent. Gen. Herren replied with details about Theodore. Anderson was in a detail fired on in the outskirts of an Alsace-Lorraine town. Wounded, he entered a pillbox before the Germans overran the area. When the Americans surged back, Anderson was gone—captured.

Her Favorite Correspondent

Korman is Mrs. Anderson's favorite correspondent, "the only one who gave news about Ted's division." As a result of reading Korman's stories, she also wrote to a chaplain, two officers, one of them her husband's commander, and a soldier in the same division who had been captured and liberated. All replied with more information about Anderson.

Mrs. Anderson, who lives with her parents, has another hunch—that her husband will be back by April 30, when their daughter, Theodora, will be 3. She's so confident of it, in fact, that she has started hunting for a flat.

REMARK OF GIRL HELPS DEEPEN KIDNAP MYSTERY

The cryptic remark by a blonde girl, known only as Connie—"I thought something like this would happen"—uttered when three Negroes, one in army uniform, menaced her merchant marine escort with a knife and abducted her into a car at 3 a. m. Wednesday near Washington blvd. and Green st., yesterday heightened a police mystery that contained no tangible clews.

Police had only the story of the escort, Nick Martini, 17, of 1220 S. Lawndale av., second cook and baker with the merchant marine.

Martini, who has returned to Philadelphia, Pa., prior to going to sea, said he met the girl five hours before the kidnaping in the Chicago theater.

Martini and the girl were standing in a doorway when the car bearing the three Negroes pulled up to the curb. The one in the army uniform moved behind the wheel and the others got out, held a knife to Martini's throat, and grabbed the girl.

It was then, he told police, that she made her strange remark.

PLANTERS HOTEL PAYS U. S. $1,155 IN OPA JUDGMENT

The metropolitan office of price administration yesterday obtained consent judgments and damages in Circuit court suits against the Planters hotel, 19 N. Clark st., and 13 food stores accused of overcharging customers. The hotel, in a judgment approved by Judge Robert J. Dunne, paid the treasury $1,155. The food stores paid $50 each. In another case OPA Hearing Commissioner Thomas E. Fairchild suspended the Paradise Food Shop of Gary, Ind., for six days.

VOICE OF YANK ON W-G-N; SON, 2, TRIES TO REPLY

Relatives and friends here stayed close to radios yesterday to hear a W-G-N broadcast in which four Chicagoland soldiers spoke from Europe. A typical reaction was that of Mrs. Zoe Hassell, 540 N. Humphrey av., Oak Park, after hearing her husband, Lt. Vern J. Hassell, on the program. She said the sound of his voice was her "best gift in the year he has been away." Their son, David, 2, clapped his hands excitedly and tried to answer the voice of his daddy, who is in Belgium.

Lt. Hassell, assistant engineering officer with the 9th photo reconnaissance squadron, said his living conditions are rough, but compared to those of men at the front, he is "living in the lap of luxury." G. I. food is nourishing, but not appetizing, he reported. Sgt. Paul Egyarto of 4941 N. Troy st., also broadcasting from Belgium, said army food is "not the best, but I eat it." He and his comrades have built a shack for living quarters, he said.

Others on the broadcast were Staff Sgt. Stanley J. Meaden of 40 Lake st., Oak Park, and Pvt. Wilmer E. Hall of Winthrop Harbor. Hall, a switchboard operator, said he likes France, where he now is stationed, better than England. Meaden, also broadcasting from France, described Paris as a "playground" and a "fascinating city."

TOLEDANO TO VISIT WASHINGTON.

MEXICO CITY, April 5 [AP]—Vicente Lombardo Toledano, president of the Latin American Confederation of Labor, said today he planned to go to Washington, D. C., to meet other labor leaders who attended the recent London labor congress before proceeding to the world security conference at San Francisco, Cal.

NAZI PRISONERS LEARN IT ISN'T SO ABOUT U. S.

Decadent? 300,000 Are Changing Minds

prisoners still seem to be trying to keep a stiff upper lip and to encourage their families back home, but they know they are whistling in the dark, not daring to face the facts of Germany's doom.

If a letter contains an obvious lie, it is returned to the writer by camp authorities. It has been rarely necessary, in recent months, to return such letters, camp commanders said.

Allowed to Hear Radio.

The prisoners are permitted to listen to American radio stations and to read American newspapers. At first they scoffed at our news reports, saying: "That's all propaganda." Now most of them believe what they hear and read. They were intensely interested in the Yalta conference, which they knew was held to decide their fate.

The first German prisoners to arrive in this country were members of the elite Africa corps. They were surly and arrogant. They didn't believe the news reports about the campaign in Italy until a batch of prisoners arrived from Italy. They didn't believe the reports of the invasion of France until prisoners arrived from France. Now the once arrogant Africa corps men are working meekly as mechanics and craftsmen, using skills which some of them learned in the German army.

Read Up on America

Col. T. B. Birdsong, commander of the prisoner of war camp at Camp Shelby, Miss., said the prisoners' interest in the history, geography, and culture of the United States has increased steadily as the months pass. He cited the titles of books requested by the prisoners and placed in their library: "The American Commonwealth," "Story of America in Pictures," "The United States, Its Past and Present," "American History," Benjamin Franklin's "Autobiography," "What Is America?" "Thomas Jefferson," "This New America," "Voices of America," "George Washington," "Growth of Our Country," "Flags of America," and "American Idealism."

"I doubt that Adolf Hitler would approve those books," Col. Birdsong remarked.

Many phases of American life surprise and impress the German prisoners, camp commanders said. The Germans are amazed to see the comradeship between American officers and enlisted men, in great contrast to the rigid caste system of the German army. And as they see their own army beaten to a pulp, they are beginning to understand that democracy works, even in an army.

Impressed by U. S. Wealth

The prisoners also are impressed by the tremendous wealth of the United States. They know that no automobiles have been made for civilians for several years, yet they see that nearly all civilians have automobiles, which were fantastic luxuries in Germany.

Many of the prisoners are employed in army shops managed by civilians. In the present labor market, the army sometimes finds it hard to get civilian foremen of the highest competence. Occasionally, a prisoner is more skilled than his boss. Yet he sees his boss drive to work in his car; he notes the boss' good clothes and air of well being.

The prisoner's conclusion is obvious: "If I were in this country I, too, could have an automobile and could be prosperous."

Camp commanders said they can sense the general attitude of the prisoners by the way they salute. When discipline is good, salutes are snappy and military. When a prisoner wishes to show special respect, he clicks his heels and makes an especially good salute.

Incident at Fort Custer

At Fort Custer, Mich., a truck approached the post flag pole at the beginning of the daily retreat ceremony. The truck driver, an American soldier, stopped and stood beside the truck, saluting his flag. Twelve German prisoners piled out of the back of the truck, lined up beside the American soldier, and stood stiffly at attention, giving the German army salute as the Stars and Stripes was lowered. Prisoners are not required to salute the flag of their conqueror. American officers who saw the incident were surprised.

Maj. Waldrep of the Memphis camp recalled that he recently was notified by the Red Cross that the father of one of his prisoners had been killed in a bombing raid.

"I told him the news in as kindly a tone as I could," Maj. Waldrep said. "He swallowed a couple of times, but said nothing. Then he gave me a very courteous salute. It was his way of saying thanks."

Would Be Citizen

Charles F. [Chuckie] Cohen, 9 months old, 3105 Wilson av., said to be one of the youngest naturalization applicants on record, yesterday was named in a petition here for United States citizenship. He was born in Winnipeg, Man., July 9, 1944, and brought to Chicago Aug. 27.

The petition was filed by the baby's mother, Mrs. Doreen Rita Cohen, 23, who also was born in Winnipeg, but naturalized here Dec. 19. The father, Sgt. Maj. Max Cohen, 25, who is not a citizen, is with the Canadian army and plans to be naturalized after the war.

IKE ORDERS PROBE OF WAR PRISONERS' DEATHS IN TRANSIT

PARIS, April 5 (AP)—Gen. Eisenhower has ordered an investigation into the death by suffocation of an undisclosed number of German prisoners of war during their movement by rail in the American zone of operations on March 15 and 16.

An official statement today disclosed the deaths, which happened during movement in boxcars from the forward area to prisoner of war camps in the rear, and said Eisenhower had informed the German high command of the incident and of steps taken to insure a proper investigation. The Swiss government has been invited to designate an official to participate in the investigation.

"The interim report which has been rendered," the statement said, "indicated the deaths were caused by suffocation resulting from insufficient ventilation in some of the new American type of boxcars used, aggravated by the higher temperatures prevailing at that date. Prior to this a large number of prisoners of war had been transported in the same type of cars without ill effects."

Argentina Will Intern Japanese Diplomats

BUENOS AIRES, Argentine, April 5 [Reuters]—The Argentine government today issued a decree for the internment of all Japanese diplomats and consular officials and their households pending the exchange of Japanese and Argentine diplomatic personnel. The government also decided to confiscate all property belonging to axis states.

PLEA TO NATIVES WORN ON BACKS BY YANKS IN ASIA

Pvt. Robert E. Lee, 3035 N. Racine av., Chicago radio singer, has returned home on furlough after two years of service in the China-Burma-India war theater. He is visiting his wife, Jeanie, a photographer's model. On his uniform Pvt. Lee wore the Purple Heart and the bronze star—and a leather patch on his back, containing an American flag and message identifying the wearer as an American soldier. Pvt. Lee said Yanks rely on "Terry and the Pirates" in the Overseas Tribune to keep them informed on the progress of the war.

10-STATE RIVER GROUP OPPOSES U. S. 'AUTHORITY'

Omaha, Neb., April 5 (AP)—The 10-state Missouri river states committee tonight adopted a resolution declaring it does "not approve the 'authority' measures" introduced in congress for Missouri river development because it objects "to granting any agency unchecked authority to engage in private business."

The resolution, adopted after an all-day session, said the committee urged "that every consideration of the administration of the facilities resulting from the proposed development of the Missouri river basin recognize the rights of and grant representation to the people and states affected."

ASK CURB ON USE OF SOLDIERS, 18, IN COMBAT DUTY

Bill Would Require Six Months of Training

BY PHILIP DODD
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., March 5—Four members of the senate military affairs committee today introduced a bill which would forbid the army to send inducted soldiers under 19 years old into combat unless they have had six months of training.

Sen. Revercomb.

Sen. Revercomb [R., W. Va.], author of the bill, said in an interview the measure was designed to direct the army to follow policies it had announced when the draft age was lowered to 18 in October, 1942, and later given support by Gen. Joseph T. McNarney when he was deputy chief of staff.

"At the time the senate was debating lowering the draft age," Revercomb said, "we were told that no 18 year old boys would be sent into combat without 12 months of training. That came from Sen. Reynolds [D., N. C.], then chairman of the senate military committee.

Policy Abrogated

"Then, last June 7, Gen. McNarney, new deputy supreme commander in Italy, said that no man under 19 years of age would be sent overseas. This policy was abrogated in December by Undersecretary of War Patterson."

Revercomb said senators are being swamped with letters from constituents who have lost 18 year old sons in the war, many of whom were sent overseas with as little as 15 weeks training.

"We point with horror to newspaper pictures of teen-age Nazis who have gone into battle with less than three months training," Revercomb said, "yet our army is following a similar policy.

Thomas Doubts Passage

"In this bill we are not trying to tell the army how to run its business. But when congress, acting for the civilian population, granted the right to induct men for military service, it insisted that those men be adequately trained before they were sent into combat. If the military leaders adopt a policy contrary to one they themselves established, I think it is the duty of congress to act."

Senators joining Revercomb in sponsoring the bill were Wilson [R., Ia.], Stewart [D., Tenn.], and Johnson [D., Colo.]. Revercomb said he had been assured of wide support for the bill.

However, Sen. Thomas [D., Utah], chairman of the senate military committee, told reporters he expected the bill would meet considerable opposition when it reaches the floor. He said Gen. Thomas T. Handy, deputy chief of staff, had told his committee recently that a restriction such as that proposed by Revercomb would "hamper the progress of the war."

DAY by DAY on the FARM
By GAIL COMPTON

April 5, 1945.

WITH a few stabs already made at field work, the men's attention has been focused on the farm machinery. There have been two breakdowns so far this spring, both affecting the manure spreaders. One spreader is again in running condition and new parts have come for the other.

Considerable work is being done to get the disks in shape to handle a heavy planting program. One has been fitted with new parts to replace broken and worn ones. The other has been equipped with new disks. Using the old frame, the men mounted 18 inch disks on the front and 16 inch disks on the rear, making it a better machine than it was before.

Machinery Geared

A survey of the other equipment shows it in good condition, and the farm should go thru the summer with only the usual minor repairs. Seldom can a farmer work his equipment hard all summer without experiencing some breakdowns. For this reason, farmers often say that the three essentials for farming are binder twine, baling wire, and a jackknife.

The new one man hay baler has arrived at the local implement dealer's store and is being set up for delivery to the farm. The men are looking forward to using this new machine because it will eliminate much of the dirty work connected with baling hay.

A small black oak on the north side of the farm near one of the homes presents a strange sight. Protruding from its side is a thermometer. The temperature of the tree is being taken to learn how the temperature in the heart of a tree differs from that outdoors.

Measuring Tree's Heat

A hole was drilled to the heart wood. Then a long thermometer was pushed in and sealed against the outside air. From time to time, the thermometer will be drawn out, read, and compared with outside temperatures. Previous experiments in this work show that the temperature inside a tree may vary as much as 15 degrees from that outside. An attempt will be made with this trial to determine the usual range of temperature inside a tree, readings being taken in different periods of the day.

It is presumed that, on a hot day, the inside of the tree will be cooler than the outside, while the reverse will be true on cold days.

The young son of one of the farm workers makes quite a sight these days with his new pet. It is a little bantam hen that he carries about the yard under one arm. The hen seems to enjoy the comradeship, for when the lad puts it down it stays close to his side, clucking contentedly when picked up again.

The FARM by Ben Markland

EACH year the gardeners on the Wheaton farm make large plantings of onion seed, depending upor this type of planting for the main late season crop and for winter storage bulbs. It is recommended that home gardeners who want a large crop for storage follow this same plan, because it eliminates the necessity of buying expensive onion sets and produces bulbs that withstand storage better than onions grown from sets.

Seed varieties to be planted in the farm gardens include Southport Yellow Globe, Yellow Globe Danvers, and Golden Globe. Seed should be planted ¼ to ¾ inch deep, with about 18 seeds to each row foot. The rows should be 18 inches apart.

When the stems are four inches tall the plants should be thinned to stand about three inches apart. The plants pulled in the thinning process may be transplanted to another row.

COLD PULLS ITS PUNCH; CHICAGO AREA UNHARMED

The Chicago area came thru its first spring frost unscathed yesterday. Horticulturists, orchardists, and farmers predicted that more freezing weather scheduled for the early morning hours today also would do little harm.

Meanwhile other parts of the midwest dug out from a heavy blanket of snow totaling 17 inches in some sections as sunshine sent the temperatures rising. The weather bureau said freezing weather would persist until late this morning when increasing cloudiness would help to send the temperature to 60 degrees. Low tonight will be 52 degrees.

In the southern Michigan fruit belt the temperature hung near the freezing point and peach, apple, plum, and cherry trees were not harmed, said L. A. Boyd, director of the Michigan Fruit Sponsors.

H. S. Wright, Du Page county farm adviser, said the cold snap had not affected field crops. The wind which accompanied the freezing weather prevented real frost damage, he said.

ICKES AGREES V-E DAY WILL HIKE GAS RATION

Washington, D. C., April 5 (AP)—Interior Secretary Ickes said today he agrees with the deputy petroleum administrator's prediction that there will be a 50 per cent increase in civilian gasoline allotments after victory in Europe.

Deputy Administrator Davies, who made the prediction last week, said today it will mean an increase of between 100,000 and 200,000 barrels of gasoline a day for civilian use. About twice that much, he estimated would be needed to lift rationing.

Ickes, who is petroleum administrator for war, said the rationing angle is "still up to the OPA." He said it depends entirely on army and navy movements.

A Bell that rings for Liberty... Every Morning

Millions of alarms have rung since our people were forced by war to clench their friendly hands into hard-hitting fists. Some of the hands were dainty and beautifully manicured ... some were wrinkled and tired ... but, all proved equal to the biggest job that ever faced this or any other land.

Our nation has shown that it can produce the sinews of war on a scale never believed possible before. New found energy, ingenuity and skills have given our people self-reliance. They are determined to apply themselves to the task ahead until final victory is won.

Surely, the seasoned veteran and self-disciplined civilian, working together, will master whatever problems peacetime may present. The future for America and for all of us can be as bright as we wish to make it.

VETERANS VOTE A HEARING FOR CHRYSLER PLAN

Committee Appointed to Draft Invitation.

BY GEORGE HARTMANN

Despite the plea of their own officers as well as that of Victor Reuther, an official of the United Automobile Workers' union [CIO] for support of the union's plan to protest the seniority of ex-service men, members of the veterans' group of the Dodge Chicago plant voted unanimously last night to invite a representative of the Chrysler corporation to explain the corporation's plan first.

More than 150 veterans, representing 3,700 veterans at the plant where engines for B-29 Super Fortresses are made, met at 6908 S. Western av. and after a three hour session appointed a committee to draft the invitation for a company representative to appear at the veterans' meeting next Thursday.

Leaders Criticize Company

The night meeting was held to hear reports from John Ford, chairman of the veterans' group, and Joseph Silka, its secretary, who attended a union meeting with Chrysler representatives in Detroit, Mich., Tuesday, called by the company to discuss the corporation's proposal for veterans employed and to be employed.

Ford, Silka, and Reuther, who was sent by R. J. Thomas, UAW president, from Washington, D. C., to quell the threatened uprising of the veterans, blamed the company for discharging the veterans. The men dropped had charged that the plant was "a haven for draft evaders" while ex-soldiers were being let go.

Reuther Assails Employer

"There are 6,000 probationary employes employed at Dodge Chicago," Reuther shouted. "Of that number 1,000 are veterans of this war. Yet the company has chosen to discharge the veterans when there is no rule covering the manner determining lay-offs of probationary employes.

"The company has chosen to stir up the veterans, to pit them against civilians, when this could have been prevented if they had laid off probationary civilian workers instead of ex-service men."

Because neither Ford nor Silka could explain in detail the corporation's offer at Tuesday's meeting, the veterans voted to hear the company explain its position. Reuther also was invited to attend Thursday's session. If the Chrysler corporation fails to send its representative, the veterans intimated they would "back the union's seniority proposal for ex-service men." This provides that war service be added as seniority after the veteran has obtained a job and served as probationer.

FLORIDA FIGHTS IN HIGH COURT TO KEEP UNION RULE

Washington, D. C., April 5 (AP)—The attorney general of Florida argued before the Supreme court today that the public will need divine help if labor unions are held to be exempt from state regulation.

The state official, J. Tom Watson, insisted Florida was making valid use of its police power in trying to enforce requirements that paid business agents of unions must take out a $1 license and that labor organizations register names and addresses of their top officials.

Claim Rights Violated

The United Association of Journeymen Plumbers and Steamfitters, local 234, AFL, had asked the Supreme court to declare the Florida law invalid on the ground that it violated the Bill of Rights.

The regulations, union attorneys argued earlier, impose a previous general restraint on the rights of workers to speak, to assemble, and to function thru labor organizations.

Watson, perspiring and wiping his face with a rumpled handkerchief as he arose to argue, made an unusual request of the court.

"In spite of my 35 years' practice, and my 60 years of age, I'm a little nervous," he said. "I wish the court would give me about four minutes to get warmed up before the justices start firing questions at me."

Court Silent 10 Minutes

He and the court laughed. The justices granted his wish by remaining silent about 10 minutes. Then they began asking questions about requirements a union business agent must meet before he can get a Florida license.

"He is required to be a citizen," Watson told the court. "But so are the President and members of congress. Is it more unreasonable to ask this of a union agent than of these officials?

"He cannot get a license if he has been convicted of a felony. But that provision is in licensing regulations in every state of the United States.

"He must be a person of good moral character. Well—the law affects only paid representatives. The union agent can even have a bad character, provided they don't pay him for his work.

"I don't know what could be more reasonable—and if unions are found not subject to that kind of reasonable regulation, God help us."

RAISES DICTATOR CRY AGAINST CIO ELECTRIC UNION

Whether local No. 1150 of the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers [CIO], 166 W. Jackson blvd., was — and is—conducted as a democracy or as a dictatorship became a question yesterday in Judge Donald S. McKinlay's Superior court.

Harry Morgan

The question arose at a hearing on a petition of Harry Morgan, expelled from membership in the union, for an injunction forbidding the union to cause him to be fired from his job in the plant of the Chicago Flexible Shaft company, 5600 Roosevelt rd. Morgan set forth that he is in danger of dismissal because of a closed shop clause in the union's contract.

Miss Merle King, 5843 Lake st., recording secretary of the union, brought it up when she was unable to remember how many of the local's 5,000 members were in meeting when its constitution and by-laws were adopted April 27, 1944.

Miss King's minutes didn't say how many of the members were present when the "executive board approved" the constitution.

After Miss King had testified that as far as she knew there had been no constitution or by-laws previously, Morgan's attorney, William J. Grace, said: "Then it looks as if the union was a dictatorship of one or two people."

Testimony will continue today.

It takes 24,483 Freight Cars to put this War Materiel aboard a big Convoy

The figures relating to materiel—(from Army and Navy sources)—give a good idea of the enormous quantities carried by a big convoy on a crossing to one of the major war zones.

The other figures—those in italics—show the number of freight cars needed to transport those war supplies to port.

Collecting all that materiel—bringing it hundreds, even thousands of miles—delivering it to ship side on schedule, in a pre-arranged order—doing it day after day—is one of the biggest and most responsible jobs railroads have.

Yet, thanks to the magnificent cooperation of the Navy, the Army, port authorities, shippers and traveling Americans—the railroads are doing this vital job smoothly and methodically—and will continue to do so till Victory is won!

THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

THE SENATE FINDS ITSELF

The senate of the United States has found itself. In stripping Henry Wallace's job of most of its power to do harm before they gave it to him, in refusing appointment to the incompetent fellow traveler, Aubrey Williams, and in rejecting the slave labor bill the senators set themselves firmly against a totalitarian America.

By voting down the administration's atrocious man power bill the senate saved the American people from personal slavery. Mr. Roosevelt's fantastic foreign policy would make the American citizen an economic slave for the benefit of the impoverished, incompetent, and warmaking nations of Europe. That must not be permitted. The senate, having found itself, should now go on aggressively to free the country from the grip of the incompetent dictators who are destroying our economy.

Mr. Roosevelt, with his usual carefree disregard of American wellbeing, has undertaken to impose on our people the major part of the cost of restoring the destruction of the war that Europe brought on itself. Russia expects to get a loan of 6 billions or more, on terms far more favorable than any American citizen could expect from his own government. The British expect hardly less generous treatment. The French would like us to restore what the Nazis destroyed. The more countries our armies liberate, the more such demands we may expect to face.

The demands are not merely for charity to save stricken peoples from starvation while they are putting their affairs in order. The expectation is that America will restore Europe's pre-war prosperity at no great cost to Europeans. Congress already has put its foot down in one direction with the proviso that lend-lease shall be used to win the war and not for rehabilitation purposes. It will have to be vigilant to be sure that its mandate is not ignored by the New Dealers, as they have ignored other statutory directions in the past.

The senate's declaration of independence comes, fortunately, at a time when many internal problems will be presented by the impending fall of Germany. On the excuse that we are still at war with Japan, Mr. Krug and his war production board, Mr. McNutt and his war man power commission, and all the multitudes of little minds in Washington who have been fouling up the country's economy with their directives will try to hold on to the powers that were tolerated because the nation had undertaken the unprecedented task of fighting two major wars at once. The New Dealers are afraid of peace because they have no solution for the problems that it will present.

The only way those problems can be met is to deprive these mentally bankrupt planners of authority and let the American people work out their salvation thru their own ingenuity. It is obvious that production for war must be cut drastically when only Japan remains to be beaten. The New Dealers are not going to cut it unless they are forced to do so. They would rather waste additional billions on unneeded munitions than chance unemployment, for which they have no solution. The New Deal chief of army supply, Gen. Somervell, would rather waste billions than run the risk that he may be blamed for some supply shortage. The senate cannot afford to accept without question the assurances of this political general. It must keep a far tighter rein on expenditures for war than it has in the past if the government is not to be completely bankrupt.

At the peak of war production the war production board controled every pound of essential raw materials used by the industrial plants of the country. That is no longer necessary. War plants must have first call on every material that they require, but there will be far more raw materials available than war plants need.

It is none of Mr. Krug's business what is done with these materials. It is none of his business whether we get vacuum cleaners, or washing machines, or refrigerators first. It will, naturally and inescapably, be a tremendous problem to determine who must continue war production and who may go into civilian production. The answer is that every plant or corporation should bear its fair load of war production, within the limits of reasonable efficiency. But it is not necessary, to assure this fairness, that the war production board should have the same tight control over civilian production that it has over war production.

The burocrats have no interest in successful reconversion and they have every interest in preventing it, because that will perpetuate their jobs, or so they hope. Congress must prevent their sabotage by depriving them of the authority that they have so abused.

AIR LINES CAN ALSO DELIVER MESSAGES

Senate committees are discussing two subjects at the moment as if they bear no relationship to each other. The first is American overseas commercial aviation and the other is American overseas communications. The only point in common which senators so far have evidenced ability to discern is that both fields are the subject of proposed monopolies.

Secretary of the Navy Forrestal, in private life a Wall st. investment banker, and Rear Adm. Joseph R. Redman, chief of naval communications, have emerged as the principal advocates of a mandatory merger of the 13 radio, telegraph, cable, and press wireless companies now serving the nation. To these they would add the war time network of communications facilities developed by the army and navy, placing the resultant monopoly under government control which, it is represented, would be partial only. In all probability, however, the burocrats would not miss the opportunity to bring the entire system under complete control if given the chance.

The proponents of monopoly in overseas aviation have been pressing their case with great energy. The air line which is most fervid in urging an American "flag" or "community" company is Pan American World Airways. Before the war this company enjoyed a virtual monopoly in overseas operations, and it apparently is willing to accept a large measure of government control if it can manage to maintain its favored position by subordinating potential competitors in a community company.

The majority of American air lines which are seeking overseas routes are in favor of competition. This deserves the especial attention of the senate because the tendency now is to look upon air lines purely as transportation companies. In truth they are also communications companies, because messages can be carried secretly and rapidly by plane.

Inasmuch as the principal argument advanced for a communications monopoly is that of delivering military and diplomatic dispatches quickly and in secret, congress should see the necessity of considering communications together with the problem of air transport. The argument for a communications monopoly loses much of its plausibility in this perspective and, in view of the fact that all but one of the major air lines feel that they can give improved service as competitors in the field of overseas aviation, there is very little left to be said for the other monopoly scheme to govern world air traffic.

THE SOLDIERS' REWARD: PASSAGE HOME

There are many guesses at the plans of the more desperate Nazis, big and little, who know that their numbers are up in the courts of summary justice. Apparently even Frederick the Great couldn't save their main armies now or prevent the occupation of the larger part of Germany. Therefore the toughest, most fanatical and most compromised of the Hitlerites are supposed to be prepared to withdraw into the mountains and make a junction with the troops which have been holding northern Italy for months.

Northern Italy is an industrial area which might explain the stubborn defense of it by divisions needed in Germany. Speculation adds the theory that these divisions, estimated at probably 200,000 men, are intended for Hitler's last throw of the dice. Rumors say that great stores of supplies have been concentrated in the mountain region chosen for the last battle of Nazidom, its creators, and its dupes. It would seem more sensible for the Hitler hierarchy to attempt to save their skins by flight by air to some country where they might hope to buy protection. The question would be, what country?

Herr Hitler is not eminently sensible and he may be heading for a Walpurgian finish even with the hope that the cost of getting him would be so high that he might be offered, as an alternative, a Napoleonic retreat. All this is speculation which must soon be resolved one way or another by events. It can be said now, however, that if the Nazis, having lost Germany, undertake to do what the Japs did on Iwo, the work of digging them out should not fall on any part of the American army. The task of the American soldier in Europe is almost completed. When the Nazis have been reduced to a bandit last stand in the mountains the task will be done.

Already our soldiers have done far more than their share of the work. We have four times as many men on the western front as our allies have put there, and Americans have done an even larger share of the fighting than their numbers would warrant. They have suffered more than their share of the losses, have captured more than their share of the enemy, and have accounted for more than their share of the mileage taken. While all this has been going on we have been making enormous contributions of food and fighting equipment to our allies, including Russia, and have been winning the war against Japan almost single handed. If the last mopping up is left to our allies they will still have contributed less to the victory in Europe than we did.

Digging out the vermin should be the responsibility of the Europeans who have suffered from the Hitlerites and should be glad to finish him off. France alone should be equal to the job and might rejoice in it. If 17 weeks will train an 18 year old American boy for duty, the French have had time to raise an army. They have some excellent divisions, partly colonial, in action. For the last fight the Americans can furnish all sorts of equipment. The British have a stake in seeing Hitler and his crew to the finish and they have been additionally enraged, if that were needed, by the persistent and futile sending of bombs at London even when the war is lost and vengeance approaches. That alone would indicate that the German when he wants to be stupid has no peer.

Russians should count it a pleasure to hunt Hitler down and get his head. In this all the Poles would join in comradeship with the soviet soldiers and to them can be added nearly all the people of Europe, including, probably, the Austrians. The cleanup should be Europe's job. Shortly, we all hope, the campaign will be over, Germany will be conquered and the American armies will have earned the right to rest on their arms. It is then time to stop thinking of the armies as instruments and the casualty lists as percentages. These are American men, most of them young, whose only great reward is safe passage home. They have done their work and done it magnificently. They've seen all they want to see of Europe. What they want to see now is a transport, a home port, and home. They have earned it.

The United States owes it to these soldiers to use them with economy and to reward as many as possible as soon as possible with life in the country they served.

A LINE O' TYPE OR TWO

How to the Line, let the quips fall where they may. Reg. U. S. Pat. Office

ONE TOUCH OF BACCHUS

The fathers and grandfathers of the Yanks who took Würzburg by storm used to sing a merry ditty about that city's beer, thus: "Down, down, down where the Würzburger flows, flows, flows." At this point our memory jumps the track, since the time was 40 years ago, but we can still come out strong with the last lines of the chorus: "Rhine wine is fine, but a cold stein for mine, down where the Würzburger flows." [The name was pronounced in American style, without the umlaut.]

* * *

The Würzburger song, no doubt a bow to the authors' favorite beer agent, originated, we believe, in a musical comedy of Chicago origin. It caused another beer agent, who handled a domestic line of goods, to turn pale amber hue from jealousy. He promptly instigated a rival song, which ran: "Bud Budweiser's a friend of mine, friend of mine, yes, a friend of mine; and the reason I'm feeling so fine is Bud Budweiser." This was favorably received, but it didn't crowd the Würzburger song out of the barber shop repertory.

* * *

The shows that contained these malted melodies had long runs in Chicago and then went to Broadway, where the drama critics promptly murdered them. In one of them, maybe "The Royal Chef," Dave Lewis, a comedian of vast and inexplicable popularity on Randolph st., had the nerve to sing to Broadway's first-nighters a long, nostalgic ballad whose refrain was "Take me back, take me back, to that dear old Chicago town." His ticket was written before midnight.

* * *

Then up sprang Victor Herbert, a superior composer, with a song in which New York sophistication mocked at Chicago's beery sentimentality. Its title was "Absinthe Frappé." It caused no increase in the national statistics on absinthe fiends, and the words have not survived.

BERCHTESGADEN MEETING

In Berchtesgaden now, what congregated,
Uncountable, and ghostly gatherers crowd
Pathway, and peak, and pass? What horror-freighted,
Phantasmagoric shapes the valleys shroud?

Prey to the sudden prescience of despair,
Who is that little man glaring at gloom,
Stark and benumbed with terror, staring there?

"The Führer fears our welcome, we who gather
The one time flower of Europe's blood and bone?
Not hundreds, nay, nor thousands; millions, rather,
Implacably awaiting, still as stone!

"Behold at last our mad, remorseless legions
Born of the lands your swastika soaked sodden
With blood and fire from death's remotest regions,
Salute you, little man of Berchtesgaden!

"And where in the darkest maw of infinity,
Or where in the farthest void the stars have trodden,
Will you find refuge, now, from these you see
At rendesvous with you in Berchtesgaden?"

Lister Alwood.

Substitute Alarm Clock

The first faint flush of dawn edges the nearby apartment buildings. Soon the clop-clop of the milkman's horse, the clatter of the newsboy's little tin wagon, and the muffled roar of street cars, buses, and automobiles will add their rising crescendo to the symphony of an awakening city. Suddenly there breaks upon the still morning air a strange staccato crow.

I stir uneasily in my dreams. . . .

From the kitchen comes the aroma of pancakes, frying bacon, and maple sirup. Granny, in gingham apron, is putting the finishing touches on breakfast. Outside, Gramps is already busy with the morning chores. Old Dobbin stomps impatiently in his stall as tho anxious to get on with the spring plowing. Clucking mother hens scratch in the chicken run. The tinkle of distant bells announces that the cows want to be turned out to pasture. Birds are caroling. Frogs are booming. Over all is the fragrance of an orchard in full bloom. Once more I am a carefree youth who must be up and off to school. . . .

I stir again in my dreams. Suddenly there breaks upon the still morning air another strange staccato crow.

I'll kill that blankety-blank rooster! Hig.

A PERSONAL APRIL

To call this April just another spring
Would be unfair to you and me. Behold
The sun's new rôle in gentle burgeoning,
Its message penciled on the boughs in gold.
The thrush grows inarticulate upon
A carol much too sacred and profound
For ordinary ears; the wind has gone
Back to the sea to find a sweeter sound.
The rain that whispered in the trees last night
Promised a special song upon return;
The wrens repeat their vows and larks recite
Hosannas in the skies—in rapt concern
The campanile holds a silver note
For us within her slender, singing throat.

C. Middleton.

Longfellow was a guest at a water-cure [now a convent] at Boppard during his third stay in Germany. A recently discovered letter to his father indicated the place of his room; on the door is now a tablet: "Hier wohnte Longfellow, 3. Juni—18. Sept., 1842." J. T. H.

So the disgusted drama critic said to the unsuccessful producer, "Pardon me, your show is slipping." Donnafred.

April, the green-eyed monster, is in a fury because March stole her stuff.

CHARLES COLLINS.

Friend of the Yanks

[The FRIEND OF THE YANKS SERVICE office, 1 S. Dearborn st., will give personal advice and assistance to veterans, service men, and their dependents. Questions also will be answered by phone, Superior 0100; or by mail if stamped envelope is sent.]

C. W. B. asks: "At what age can a man in the coast guard ask for his release? Is it 42 as in the navy?"

Personnel of the coast guard may not be released solely by reason of age. If a person is over 38 and the need of his services is not of paramount importance, or if he is physically below standard and no assignment is available for him without retraining, his commanding officer may recommend a discharge.

G. F. asks: "Can insurance premiums be alloted from retirement pay?"

Yes.

J. M. writes: "I am 34, single, and in class 3-D because of supporting my invalid father and aged mother. I plan to marry in June. If I do marry, can my board reclassify me?"

Your local board may reclassify you at any time, and particularly if it feels your marriage in any way alters your status with respect to the dependency of your parents.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

by Dr. Theodore R. Van Dellen

To the limit of space, questions pertaining to the prevention of disease will be answered. Personal replies will be made under proper limitations, when return stamped envelope is inclosed. Dr. Van Dellen will not make diagnoses or prescribe for individual diseases.

[Copyright: 1945: By The Chicago Tribune.]

MENINGITIS IS CONQUERABLE

Now and then every community is frightened by the development of meningitis in one of its youngsters. To make matters worse, the sick child is whisked away in an ambulance, probably to some contagious institution. Mothers and teachers are placed on their guard and the news is spread far and wide by the back fence method.

The picture is made more gloomy if a playmate or two should also come down with the infection. A few years ago, we had a right to feel depressed, but a brighter side is in the offing since the discovery of the sulfa compounds and penicillin.

The causative germ, the meningococcus, thrives unusually well in the nose and throat. It may persist in this locality without disturbing the individual. In this way, a carrier may harbor the organism without encountering the disease unless an overwhelming number are present, or resistance is lowered. The microbes can be transmitted to others by coughing or sneezing. If, by chance, some one who is susceptible picks them up, the ailment may follow.

Perhaps this is why the disorder is more common in crowded areas. Mining districts and seaports suffer severely. With the concentration of soldiers in camps, army medical authorities must always be on the alert against this unwelcome and dangerous visitor. Fortunately epidemics are generally well localized and rarely widespread. The affliction is not highly infectious. Seldom do we find more than one or two victims in a single household and, in city epidemics, the distribution is quite irregular.

The invaders attack the delicate membranes about the brain and spinal cord. Like any catarrhal condition, let us say in the nose, a discharge is given off which intermingles with the normal fluid coursing thru these structures. The diagnosis is aided greatly by drawing a sample of this liquid from the spine.

Assuming that the bacteria have taken hold, how will the patient react? In some, the early findings may resemble a cold, with inflammation of the nose, throat, tonsils, or sinuses. During this period, headache and a feeling of fatigue or dullness may be noted. In others, the onset is abrupt with fever, chills, and vomiting. The most striking manifestation is persistent headache which drugs fail to relieve. Irritability, restlessness, and sensitivity to noise or light may be present. The muscles of the neck become painful and stiff—actually rigid, in severe cases. Small hemorrhages in the skin may be observed. Older physicians gave the name "spotted fever" to this illness because of the characteristic eruption. If the disease is not checked, the sufferer may go into delirium and coma.

During the last war, treatment consisted largely of administering antitoxin directly into a vein and into the spinal canal. It frequently failed. Now the sulfonamides are employed successfully to combat this powerful enemy. Rather large doses are necessary and, within two or three days, decided improvement will take place. If vomiting or delirium prevent the use of this medicine by mouth, it can be introduced beneath the skin or into the blood stream.

The knowledge that penicillin destroys the meningococcus will unquestionably give us another weapon to fight this disorder.

MULISH

I. M. writes: I am engaged to a man who has been hoarse for three months. He is too stubborn to see a doctor and I've been wondering if his trouble could be serious.

REPLY

This condition should be looked into. There are several possibilities, including some which are serious. You should insist that he be examined before marriage is considered.

TOOTH NODULES

W. R. writes: What are pulp stones?

REPLY

Small deposits of calcium within the central cavity of a tooth. As a rule, they develop from the irritation set up by decay.

PROXY FOODS

A. E. G. writes: When milk is contraindicated in the diet, what may be substituted for it?

REPLY

A Meal with Meat

Little Rock, Ark.—Country ham had been promised for lunch, and neither high waters nor rain could bar the route. Away we sped, past the house of the two sisters [two front doors, two walks, two front yards separated by a fence, but just one house, and two sisters who had lived in it for 59 years without meeting or speech], past the blue gray vista of the mountain known as Pinnacle, past the creek with the strange name of Palarm that now, in raging flood, is eating away the last old Civil war military road in the region, to come at last to the great white retreat known as the Big House. It was built 65 years ago to the exact specifications of a 16 year old bride, who never before had held a drawing pencil in her hand.

The country ham was fried, and with it went potatoes, green beans, pickled beets, salad, hot biscuit, and coffee. After it, the host, a dissenting historian of note, leaned back and lighted his cigar.

"There's two things wrong with the world today," he began. "One is economic trouble. The other is fallacious theory.

"The economic trouble is because there isn't enough country ham to go around. The fallacious theory is that fried country ham and red eyed gravy and brown, hump backed biscuit and coffee can be added to. That can't be; that's perfect."

"Red eyed gravy?" some one asked in bewilderment.

"That's Georgia," the historian's wife smiled.

"No, that's universal," he retorted. "You've heard of Graham's law and Newton's law. Well, this is just as universal, and you just ate it. Red eyed gravy is made like this. When you fry the ham, you add coffee to the juice."

"Water'll do just as well," interposed a guest who had just lost her hotel to the OPA when she had to sell $1.50 chicken fryers for 80 cents.

"No ma'am, it will not," he sputtered. "Coffee, just plain coffee. Add the coffee, and all at once you see little red eyes popping all thru it. That's red eyed gravy.

"Then you take that hump backed biscuit, tear it open, and bedew the biscuit with the red eyed gravy."

"He means sop it," interposed the guest who had lost her hotel.

"I mean bedew it," he insisted. "Bedewing a biscuit is when you sprinkle it like you Baptists do when you baptize.

"Then you eat it, and that's all. Why, once, two years ago, I had terrible stomach trouble. I saw four doctors, and none of them did me one bit of good. Then I went to Georgia and they fed me some red eyed gravy, and I haven't had a speck of stomach trouble since. Never will have, no one will, if you take it like my grandfather said he took his cottonseed bitters. Before and after breakfast and thru the day if he felt the need for it."

"Maybe they should have had it at Yalta," a guest suggested.

"No, sir," the dissenting historian replied hotly. "And I hope Mr. Fix-it in Washington never does learn of it. Didn't I say the economic trouble was because there isn't enough country ham to go around? He'd want to give it all away. Serve that at Yalta and those Communists would cut it up and pass it around themselves until there wasn't a slice left on the face of the globe.

"But Churchill probably would appreciate it. I've admired that man since the day I heard him say he had not accepted the post of prime minister to preside over the liquidation of the British empire. I turned away from the radio and said, 'Well, there's one honest man left in the world.'

"All I hope right now is that the United States senate don't take it upon itself to preside at the liquidation of the republic of the United States.

"Funny thing," he mused, "once a week I meet with four other men. We call ourselves the pentagon. One gives a paper on Dumbarton Oaks or Yalta or something of the sort, and the others tear it to bits. Then he has 10 minutes of rebuttal. Two of the men are pro-New Deal. I've spent a long time analyzing them in my mind. Those people don't have any conviction at all. They just have hope. Probably never even tasted red eyed gravy."

THE PLAYING FIELD OF BARKING

BARKING, Essex, England, March 22—Your readers may be interested to know about one corner of England where Anglo-American friendship is particularly strong. The three hundred members of this Eastbury Youth club for "teen-agers" have been enjoying for some time the regular visits of three United States army officers who coach them at basketball. The coaching has been of great value to them but they have learned more than basketball. They have learned to like and admire your boys and I venture to suggest that such visits do more to promote mutual understanding than any number of books or speeches.

I am writing this letter to express publicly our thanks to these officers. Their visits have been made in their own time, and at their own expense. London fogs, V-1 and V-2 bombs did not stop them. One of the coaches was Lt. Joseph M. Greenwood of 10826 Prospect av., Chicago. My club members thoroly enjoyed his coaching and he was very popular with them. Altho we know how much he is looking forward to returning home we shall be very sorry to see him go.

HE CAN'T FIND THEM

Chicago, March 22.—We newspaper boys appreciate a bright clear address on a house. I realize that paper boys have a reputation for not being able to throw a paper within 100 feet of the point desired unless there is a puddle of water or a window within that radius to aim at; but how many people realize that at 5 o'clock in the morning, when we start out, it is almost impossible to see the many tarnished address plates, not to mention many subscribers who have no address plates at all. I notice that the people who have the poorest address plates also take the most dimes from our salary with complaints that they have not received their paper. The address plates that should be on the back door of all apartments are very seldom put there by people who expect rear delivery. NEWSPAPER BOY.

RIDING OFF IN ALL DIRECTIONS

Monroe, N. C., March 30—Almost before Mr. Roosevelt hops upon the soap box for a splutter in favor of an agreement on world agriculture, by which American standards would be lowered to those of a bankrupt world, he jumps to another box and asks for power to cancel tariffs to allow an influx of cheap goods made by cheap labor thruout the world. Before that prattle gets cold, he hops up and demands that congress pass the work or fight bill, under the absurd pretension that without such a slave law production might stop. And this the same man, while striving for the fourth term, promised 60 million jobs. J. O. HOLLOWAY.

TELL IT TO THE TIBETANS

Chicago, April 2—The writer would like to call public attention to certain silly procedures which operate to keep oleomargarine from the public even in this time of butter shortage.

Our company restaurant, recently established, is not furnishing butter on account of conditions—but cannot supply oleomargarine, either, on account of the fact that before the present shortage it was not buying oleomargarine. If any one can tie such a silly situation, it must be the Tibetans, who use butter in their tea. O. LEO KANTAKIT.

THE CUTTLEFISH DEFENSE

Chicago, March 21.—It takes more moral courage and honesty than any New Deal puppet has heretofore shown to say, "I made a mistake."

The New Deal has made lots of mistakes in 12 years. Never has it admitted that fact in any instance. Every mistake is countered, according to standard New Deal procedure, with skunklike attacks on the opposition and, by thinly veiled innuendo, accusations against the opposition of mistakes and errors they are said to have made.

One could cite dozens of examples of the New Deal way. When NRA went haywire, there were anue screamings about "hitting below the belt" and vicious attacks upon "nine old men," whose only fault was in taking seriously their oath to uphold the Constitution. When 11 million men were out of work, Herbert Hoover was blamed by the New Deal for it all, even tho he had then been out of office for six years or more. When congress hesitated briefly in handing out blank checks, there was unloosed from the White House a dirty attack upon the members of that body, which was so unwarranted and vicious that even old Sen. Barkley got mad and shadow boxed—for a few hours—with the President.

Any man who questions the New Deal or any of its policies may expect to be branded immediately as a Tory, reactionary, prince of privilege, isolationist, economic royalist, member of the isolationist press, tool of the vested interests, or even accused of being the tool of Wall st., Japan, or Germany. That is the "defense" the New Deal offers to its own mistakes and shortcomings.

Now that toothpicks are no longer needed and some one has made a ghastly mess of rationing, we may expect daily a barrage of skunklike effluvium directed at the packers, the press, the small Republican minority in congress, and possibly Herbert Hoover. That is the New Deal's way of trying to cover up its mistakes.

SELF-DENIAL ON PENNSYLVANIA AV

Chicago, March 30—Air borne Eleanor states in this morning's interview that if we ate British rations for a month, there would be less kicking.

Perhaps if she ate typical American rations instead of White House abundance, there might be less of her mouthing about Americans eating too well.

TRUSSED BODY IN SEWER; MAY BE GAMBLER'S

Ex-Bootlegger Missing Since May 15

Police last night were investigating the possibility that the bound body of a man taken from a 12 foot sewer catch basin near Ohio st. and Union av. earlier in the day, may be that of Joe Mertsoc, 44, alias John Horak, prohibition era bootlegger, who has been missing since last May 15.

Mertsoc's wife, Blanche, of 1722 N. Lorel av., told the police that a general description of the man fitted that of her missing husband. Because of the condition of the body, a positive identification could not be made.

Attempt Identification Today

An effort will be made today to bring out the fingerprint markings on his hands with chemicals to compare them with those of the missing former bootlegger. A dentist who worked on Mertsoc's teeth will examine the victim's teeth.

Mrs. Mertsoc said that her husband drove her home on the night he disappeared, said that he was going to play cards with friends near Division st. and Damen av., and left. He never returned.

Mertsoc was said to be an inveterate gambler and to have lost more than $50,000 in the last few years. Before he disappeared he had been employed as a machinery mover at the Chrysler corporation's Chicago Dodge plant. When he was 20, he was sentenced to Pontiac reformatory for larceny. Police said a motive for the former bootlegger's disappearance probably could be found in his gambling.

May Be Pal of De Angelo

Police were also looking into the theory that the body may be that of Onofrio Vitale of Hammond, Ind., a pal of James De Angelo, whose slain body was found trussed in an automobile. Vitale has been missing since February, 1944.

Investigators were unable to determine last night whether the victim had been shot before his body was thrown into the sewer. A coroner's physician will perform an autopsy today.

LAKE'S AVERAGE LEVEL IN MARCH PUT AT 579 FEET

Lake Michigan's average level for March was 579.67 feet, a report from the United States lake survey office in Detroit, Mich., said yesterday. The lake's level represented an increase of .10 of a foot over February's level and was .08 of a foot above the average since 1900. The lake is 1.35 feet below the high stage of March, 1918, and 2.28 above the low stage of March, 1934, the report showed. The level of the lake in March, 1944, however, was .56 of a foot higher than March, 1945.

YANKS MAY LIE IN GERMAN SOIL TILL WAR IS OVER

Washington, D. C., April 5 (AP)—Some American soldiers killed in Germany may lie in reich soil until the war is over.

This possibility was made known at the war department today in response to inquiries about the burial of Maj. Gen. Maurice Rose, commander of the 3d armored division, in an American military cemetery at Ittnebach, Germany.

Dispatches from the western front, prior to the assault along the Rhine, had said that no American would be buried in Germany. Because of the deep penetration of allied forces into the reich, however, it has been impracticable to follow such a policy.

Under present plans, the dead will be buried temporarily in carefully marked cemeteries. Later, when transportation and operations permit, the bodies will be removed to permanent or semi-permanent cemeteries in France and Belgium.

DEATH OF WOMAN HIT BY CASTING HELD ACCIDENT

A verdict of accident was returned at an inquest yesterday into the death of Mrs. Annabelle Lueppers, 25, of Aurora, a war worker and the wife of Fireman Joseph Lueppers of the navy. She was killed Wednesday when she was crushed beneath a 1,200 pound casting while operating a lift truck at the Austin-Western company of Aurora.

It was Mrs. Lueppers' first day at work since her son, LeRoy, a year old, died March 19. The son's funeral was postponed until the father arrived home March 27. Fireman Lueppers, who returned from Cuba, still was on leave when his wife was killed.

Testimony disclosed that the heavy casting fell backward onto her while she was at the controls, killing her instantly. Mrs. Lueppers also is survived by another son, Donald. Services will be held at 10 a. m. tomorrow at St. Rita's church, Aurora.

FINAL MEETING BEGINS IN N. E. A. SCHOOL INQUIRY

A subcommittee of the National Education association's commission for the defense of democracy thru education, which is investigating personnel methods in the Chicago public schools, yesterday began its final meeting here to consider the findings of its inquiry.

Donald Du Shane, chairman of the investigating committee, said it probably would meet in Washington later this month to study the report further and determine whether any new information it receives is worth inclusion.

Treatment of teachers in the schools is the principal subject of the inquiry but it has been extended to include a general study of school procedure, laws, and the school board's methods of conducting its meetings. The board has refused the committee access to its records, buildings, or personnel, but Du Shane said the investigation has progressed satisfactorily despite this.

ACCUSE FORMER MARINE IN DEATH OF RICH COUSIN

Raleigh, N. C., April 5 (AP)—Harry C. Harrison, 20, former marine, was formally charged today with murder and arson in the death of his wealthy distant cousin, Mrs. John W. Higham, whose body was found Monday in her home here.

Detective Sgt. W. G. Maddrey said the charges were preferred after a watch and expensive jewelry had been found in Harrison's possession. The ex-marine denied any connection with the death.

Mrs. Higham's charred body was found following a fire in her home. She had a fractured skull. Police have not determined whether she died of burns or of the fracture.

Harrison, a member of a prominent Scotland Neck, N. C., family, came to Raleigh a few months ago to work for an insurance company after being discharged from the marines.

SKELETONS OF 3 FOUND IN NORTH HAMMOND AREA

Skeletons of three adults, buried one upon another, were dug up yesterday by laborers in the Robertsdale subdivision in the north section of Hammond, Ind. Police say they believe the bones are relics of prohibition murders of two decades ago.

Dr. Harry Brandman, Whiting deputy coroner, said the victims had been buried 15 to 20 years ago. He was unable to determine cause of death. Police probably will sift the soil for evidence and send the skeletons to Chicago for scientific study.

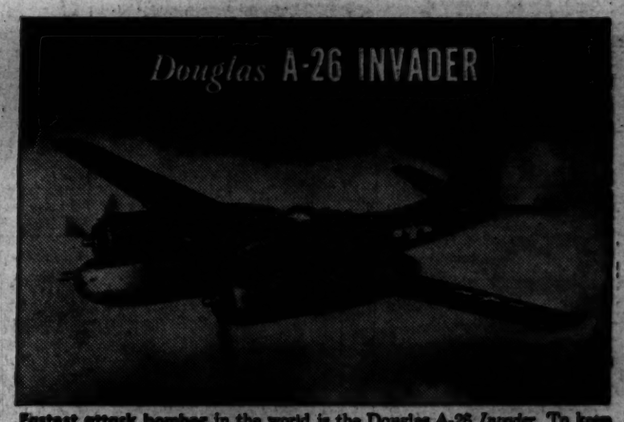
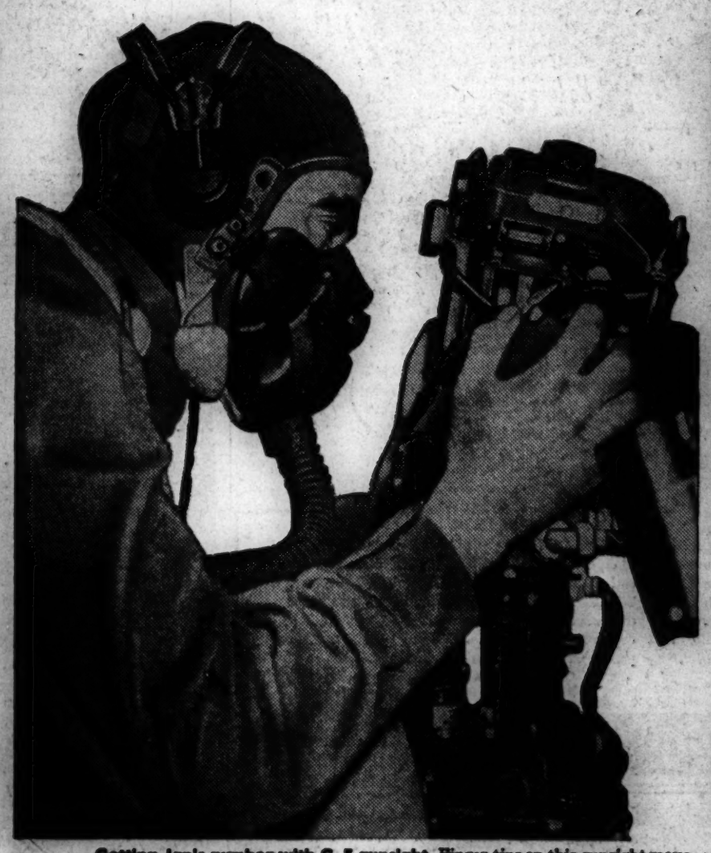
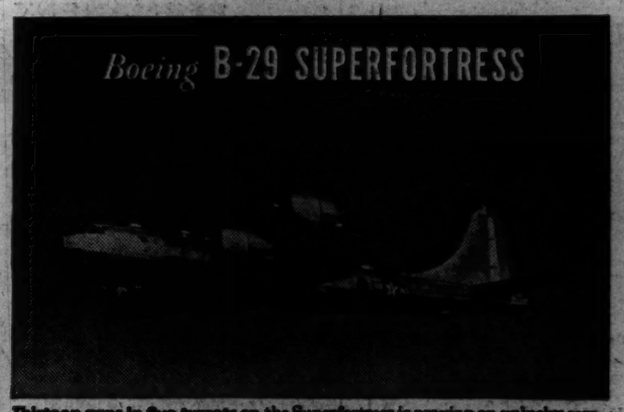
The electric 4-gun turret on this swift, versatile night fighter is literally sweeping the skies of the enemy. Guns can be swung in a complete circle, elevated, aimed, fired—by remote control.



Fastest attack bomber in the world is the Douglas A-26 Invader. To keep the enemy from turning the tables on it, G-E turrets and gun control protect the Invader from aerial attack.



Getting Jap's number with G-E gunsight. Finger-tips on this gunsight move heavy guns in a turret yards away. A G-E computer, between the sight and the guns, calculates lead, windage, gravity and parallax corrections, and automatically feeds the corrections to the guns. When the gunner gets the right image of the enemy plane in his reflecting sight—another Jap's number is up.



Thirteen guns in five turrets on the Superfortress is proving an unlucky combination—for Jap pilots. G-E gun control links five turrets, five computers, and five gunsights—all in separate parts of the plane—in electric teamplay that really clicks. Chief gunner, like a quarterback, calls the signals.

ENGINEERING FOR AIRCRAFT. Making a gun "think" was a problem on which 70 G-E engineers spent two years. Now electric computers figure out in a fraction of a second a gunner's problem that would take a mathematician hours on paper.

G-E research, engineering and G-E factories have long been available to America's plane builders, the Navy's Bureau of Aeronautics and the Army Air Forces to help make U. S. airplanes better.

Turbosuperchargers came from G-E laboratories. Heated flying suits. Electric gyro compasses. The first bazooka was built here. (Now it's the G-E bazooka for planes.) The first American version of a jet propulsion engine was G-E designed and built.

War's end won't interrupt G-E flow of contributions to aircraft makers. Our research and factories will continue to be at their service. General Electric Company, Schenectady, New York.

Homemaking Is Important Career, Too

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS

[Copyright: 1945: By News Syndicate Co., Inc.]

In the classified advertising columns of newspapers today readers will find many ads beginning: "Wanted . . ."

But among them they will not find this one: "Wanted: More than 30 million skilled homemakers to give full time to the care of their homes, their husbands, their 33 million children under 14, their 11 million children over 14 and still in school, and several million old people and dependent relatives. Also wanted, 8 million part time homemakers for similar tasks."

This "help wanted" advertisment, written by Mrs. William A. Hastings, president of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, was sent to homemakers and teachers thruout the country in the March issue of the National Parent-Teacher, official magazine of the congress.

In her "ad," Mrs. Hastings listed the qualifications and remuneration for the all-important job of homemaker like this:

"Qualifications: Should understand foods and their preparation, clothing and its care, house cleaning and home decoration. Will need great understanding of child growth and development and thoro knowledge of the laws of health for persons of all ages. Will urgently need extensive knowledge of relationships within the family—between husband and wife, parents and children, and brothers and sisters. Must be of excellent character and able to transmit that character to children. Should have a sense of humor and be healthy, cheerful, neat, and attractive; interested in church, school, and community, as well as home affairs. Knowledge of child care, laundry work, nursing, sewing, gardening, cooking, and canning is essential. Should also understand money management and family budgeting.

"Remuneration: Love and devotion of family, sometimes weariness, anxiety, and sorrow, the joy of building worth while men and women, life's choicest companionship with husband and children, and an abiding sense of creative work well done."

Mrs. Hasting's message added:

"In order that there may be qualified women to answer the urgent call of this advertisment, let us work for recognition of the importance and dignity of homemaking. Let us work toward adequate preparation in school and toward adult education in this field. Much remains to be done along these lines."

Thru the Looking Glass

The most talked of, the most publicized, and by all odds the most truly beautiful of the "beautiful" women of America aren't the toasts of stage and screen, as they once were. They're the professional models, the flawless sylphs whose pictures you see in the ads that sing of slips and shoes and fabulous hats.

Those girls are all types, but they invariably have two things in common. One is a slim, slim waist. The other is the shiny look of exquisite cleanliness.

It's this last, we think, that every woman ought to strive for. It's the most important factor in fashion this year, and it does more to make the good looking woman appear beautiful and the plain Jane appear good looking than anything else.

The models, you'll notice, are never overdressed. Their clothes are clean, plain, uncluttered, with never a superfluous ruffle or doodad. This alone helps give them that beautiful illusion of streamlined simplicity—and this again is something we should all copy with profit—but it's their gleaming physical cleanliness that gives them special radiance.

Consider their hair, for instance. They shampoo it every four or five days, as a rule, and they burnish it with brush and oil every single day. You can do this, too—and you should.

Then there is the matter of skin. They clean theirs not twice a day, as most of us lesser mortals do, but three times at least. And they give themselves a fresh and careful make-up just as often. They never look dim because their complexions are never smudged, ever so faintly, by the film of perspiration, dust, and old make-up that all of us acquire at the end of three or four hours.

If it's that beautifully crisp, fresh look that you want just concentrate on cleanliness—a brand new conception of it that means brushing hair and clothes twice as hard and twice as often, and scrubbing or creaming your skin more meticulously and more frequently than you ever did before in your life.

Marjorie Alexander Married to Army Officer in St. Louis

BY JUDITH CASS

IN Chicago with Mr. and Mrs. John Forsythe Alexander are their son-in-law and daughter, Capt. and Mrs. William Richard Sugg Jr. [Marjorie Alexander] who were married suddenly on Tuesday in St. Louis, Mo. The wedding was arranged hurriedly when Capt. Sugg of the army found his leave was canceled. His bride journeyed to St. Louis from Washington, D. C., where she has been working with the army signal corps, and Mr. and Mrs. Alexander met them there laden with bundles, including the stunning white satin bridal gown—which turned out to be a perfect fit—and cap and veil which Mrs. Alexander purchased here the week-end before the wedding.

The pretty candlelight ceremony was at 8:30 p. m. in the Church of the Holy Communion, with a reception following in the Regency room of the Chase hotel. The wedding was held in St. Louis so that Capt. Sugg might spend some part of his leave with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Sugg of that city. He had been overseas in Italy and India for two years and expects to go overseas again shortly.

The bride was attended by Miss Anne Crow as maid of honor and Miss Catherine Covell of Ladue, Mo. Capt. Sugg's father was his best man. Among the Chicagoans who went to St. Louis for the ceremony were the bride's uncles and aunts, Mr. and Mrs. Stuart Alexander and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas W. Leary, and Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Woodlock.

Capt. Sugg, a graduate in electrical engineering of Washington university, St. Louis, and his bride will go to Washington tomorrow. When he leaves, young Mrs. Sugg, a graduate of the Girls' Latin school and of Bryn Mawr, will give up her career in Washington and return to live with her parents.

On the Calendar

Because business has been so good at the smart little shop conducted by the Vocational Society for Shut-Ins in N. Michigan av., the whole space is in process of being turned into a display room, and the workroom, which formerly occupied a part of the shop, is being moved to another building. As soon as the change-over is completed, in about three weeks, the society will stress its new program to help disabled war veterans who, working in their own homes, will have this attractive outlet for their goods. It also expects to have more work for its handicapped regular workers.

At a recent meeting of the board, Mrs. John C. Slade was reelected president of the group, which was founded in the last year of World War I. Other officers are Mrs. John Miller, Mrs. Walter Meade, Mrs. Kenneth Carpenter, Miss Margaret Bell, Mrs. Henry Wood, and Mrs. Dexter Fairbank.

The South Shore Country Club Follies—"Nic Nacs of 1945," which opens its two day run tonight in the club—has solved its "curfew difficulties" by doing away with intermissions so that the show will be over early enough tomorrow night to allow plenty of time for dancing. The Saturday night performance traditionally is formal and is followed by the Follies ball. Tonight's show will be informal, with dinner for the cast preceding it. The show is the 25th revue that C. Frederick Herendeen has written for the club.

When Circle 27 of the Oak Park and River Forest center of the Infant Welfare concludes its current civic series tonight with a concert by Charles Kullman and Nan Merriman of the Metropolitan Opera association, plans already will be under way for the 1945-'46 concert series. Mrs. Harold N. Simpson will be in charge of next year's series, and Mrs. James A. Gowdy has been elected new president of the circle. Other new officers include Mrs. C. K. Childs, Mrs. James A. Laadt, and Mrs. Arthur Thiede Jr. The concerts are given in the Oak Park High school auditorium.

Today's Events

From 5:30 o'clock on this evening the French room of the Drake hotel will resound with gayety, as the Kenilworth center of the Infant Welfare society expects a large gathering for its cocktail party. Both masculine and feminine guests will have an incentive for dressing in their party best, as Garrett Bergen, Robert W. Powell, Quentin Hallburg, and Lt. John A. Andrews will select the prettiest bonnet at the gathering, while Mrs. Joseph Reiff, Mrs. Charles M. Parkin, Mrs. Bergen, and Mrs. William W. Wood will choose the outstanding necktie.

Maj. Richard R. Tewson of the British army, who recently returned from service as a battery commander in India, will be the special guest at the weekly tea today of the Chicago branch of the English Speaking union. Mrs. George A. Berry Jr. and Mrs. Harry C. Holloway will be hostesses. Maj. Tewson, who was a tea planter in India before he entered the service, fought in Burma under the late Maj. Gen. Charles Orde-Wingate. He came to Chicago to fill speaking engagements in this area on the Indian campaign.

Miss Melita Skillen, teacher and dramatic artist, will present "A Minuet" during the Cordon club's tea from 4 to 6 p. m. today.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Burch and Mr. and Mrs. Lyle Fischer will be hosts and hostesses tonight at a swimming and bowling party in the Michigan Shores club for young people who attend the Sophomore Assembly parties.

White Collar GIRL

Wolf! Wolf!

And then there is the WCG, reported by Margaret Naphin, who is wondering which wolf her job is supposed to keep away from her door.

A Likely Story

A certain stenographer asked for a raise and when her boss asked why she thought she deserved one, the bright gal replied: "I've learned to correct very carefully every one of your mistakes in your letters." Yes, she got the raise.

THE SHADOW.

That Career Girl Marriage

So your husband goes out of town for a week [the first time you've been apart since you were married] and you find that you are glad, because your hours are filled with loneliness, your heart with love, and your mind with new resolutions.

You write pages and pages to him, searching your heart and your dictionary to find new words, all of which add up to "I love you." You glimpse again the bright and shining glory of your love and vow to keep it alive always in your heart so as to color even the routineness of your every day lives.

You give thought to your problems and gain a new perspective, for you find that most of your troubles come from being so idealistic—and so very, very human! So straightway you resolve to use the two to complement each other. You write and tell him so.

Then his letters begin to come, and you see that the same thing is happening to him. None of the WCGs in his office would dream the boss could write such beautiful love letters! You ponder this, and are humbly grateful for depth and breadth, and tenderness.

And in the midst of loneliness, you realize that being apart is bringing you closer. That is when it occurs to you that you are glad your husband has gone away for a week!

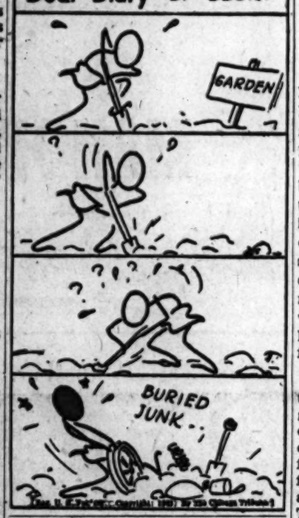
Dear Diary BY BECKY



There's a Bit of Dash in New Spring Capes

BY REA SEEGER

Dashing new capes swing into the late spring fashion parade. They have swank wide shoulders, a suggestion of a flare, and trick chest pockets held with silver metal buttons. Lined with blending color, beautifully tailored and simple, these new arrivals are the last word in high fashion. You'll wear them over suits or dresses, later over summer suits, and with summer dance and party dresses. The material is a very soft fine 100 per cent wool. The price mark is amazingly low for the striking colors, the fine fabrics, and the smart details.

A wide color range adds zest to the shopping. Black, white, beige, gray, and an eye filling kelly green offer shoppers a chance to hesitate over a choice. If the solid colors fail to click, ask to see the very effective big black and white or navy and white checked wool capes. They're made in the same manner, and are ideal for travel or all purpose wear. These breezy checks slide over navy blue suits or any solid color coat dress with distinctive chic. The checks are large but not bold, and the linings are solid contrast shades. The all-white number is a beauty, especially for party clothes, and the all-black is a perfect choice for the conservative woman.

In the same shop, you'll find some very good looking corduroy short coats in lush spring colors, pink, aquamarine, warm tan, and a silver gray. The corduroy has a wide ribbed texture, looks and feels like soft velvet. Both a free swinging coat and a belted model are obtainable in the same color range. Such corduroys contrast print summer dresses as well as summer suits of light or dark shades.

Meat Scarcity Relief Foreseen —Next Winter

BY ARNOLD ERICKSON

Relief for housewives from the pork shortage will come when snow flies, next winter's snow, live stock interests in the stock yards forecast yesterday. Meanwhile, civilians will buy more bologna, hamburger, luncheon meat, etc., in proportion to steaks and chops than they now are getting. The increase in the supply of better cuts next winter will come with the seasonal rise in meat production.

Before the meat situation improves there will be times when it will be much worse than it yet has been, distribution experts predict. As production goes into its summer slump they expect to see the government take a much larger percentage of the output of inspected packing plants to fill requirements of the military service. All the slump in output, therefore, will be reflected in decreased civilian and lend-lease supplies.

The extent of the increase in the government set aside in the summer will depend partly on the success of plans now being formulated to drive a larger share of the farm meat animal supply into packing plants under federal inspection. These plants have handled a much smaller percentage of supplies than usual since the meat crisis developed. Farmers report they can get up to $20 a hundred pounds for a few hogs at a time from illegal operators in the country. The ceiling enforced on legitimate packers in the Chicago area is $14.75.

The shortage has been more severe in pork than in any other meat, and the decline in production of this commodity isn't yet near the end. In the weeks ahead the country will see less pork in butcher shops and restaurants than ever before, and it may become difficult for inspected packers to keep the army and navy supplied with the kinds of pork cuts they want when the real pinch comes late this summer, stock yard authorities forecast.

Usually there is a decline in pork production from the April volume to the low point of the summer, in August and September, of about 10 to 15 per cent. In other words, the prospects are that the country's pork output next August and September will be that much less than it is now, and there is little likelihood that there will be any reduction in the federal requirements by then.

Last year the September pork production dropped 39 per cent below the April tonnage, but this decline was abnormal since, in April, 1944, farmers were unloading many thousands of breeding herds in a distressed market because of failure of the government to provide a price program that would encourage pork production. The existing shortage is largely the result of that selling.

Weicher Gives Distinguished Performance of Bartok's Complex and Fascinating Concerto

Concert by the Chicago Symphony orchestra, Desire Defauw, conductor; John Weicher, violinist. Presented in Orchestra hall Thursday evening, April 5, 1945, and scheduled for repetition Friday afternoon. The program:

Overture to "The Marriage of Figaro" ..... Mozart
Concerto for Violin ..... Bartok
Symphony No. 6, B minor, "Pathetique" ..... Tschaikowsky

By far the most interesting performance in Orchestra hall last night was John Weicher's of Bela Bartok's complex and fascinating Violin Concerto, played here for the first time by the Chicago Symphony orchestra, under the direction of Désiré Defauw. Close friends of Mr. Weicher's tell me he has given a year of his life to the concerto, and I believe every word of it. A concertmaster who also teaches is not overwhelmed with leisure in which to study a taxing new score, and Mr. Weicher played it superbly, in a style that would have given Bartok great pleasure, had he been there to hear it.

Technique is one thing and temperament is another. Many a violinist so equipped would have stepped out virtuoso fashion to make the concerto a vehicle. Mr. Weicher stood quietly behind a music stand and did his best to pretend he hadn't left his place at the head of the violin section. No use—the audience spotted him for what he is, a violinist of extraordinary gifts, and applauded the Bartok as if it had been Tschaikowsky.

But in this case, being Bartok is quite enough. This Hungarian who insists that art is evolution, not revolution, has written a concerto that presents its complexities to the performer, not to the audience. To the listener, this is essentially a lyrical score with the orchestra muted in pale colors, the solo instrument singing an intricate yet curiously serene melody to the crisp undercurrent of harp and kettledrum. The first movement is pastoral in character, with a formidable cadenza. The second holds beautifully wrought variations touched with prescience, a shadowy sense of scale, and now and then a touch of Debussy's liquid tone. The rondo is a kind of muted rhapsody, with brief outburst in the brass, brushed with Ravel's sense of orchestra as a harp to be strummed.

The orchestra played well, particularly in the first and second movements, and naturally will be freer in the score at later performances unless the Bartok, like so many contemporary works, is dropped after a courtesy performance.

The concert opened with the Overture to "The Marriage of Figaro," neither the mellow Mozart of the best German school nor the fiery Mozart of the crack Italians, but somewhere in a rather dull middle. Hjalmar Rabe of the bassoons was presented with a silver plaque at intermission in token of 50 years with the orchestra, and, appropriately enough, was right on hand to open the Tschaikowsky "Pathétique" immediately after. The famous Sixth never misses audience effect, but last night's performance varied between the moderately good, the flabby, and the downright dull. I had to leave at the end of the march, so lustily played the audience applauded, the men stood for a bow, and a good many people seemed to think the concert was over. The ushers opened the doors and out they went. I don't know how many were left for the adagio lamentoso.

Stokowski's Opera

When Leopold Stokowski went thru town yesterday he promised to return, perhaps in the fall, to stage a Haitian opera by William Grant Still, called "Troubled Island." Mr. Still is on the Chicago Symphony orchestra list with his Afro-American Symphony, and back about 1933 Ruth Page choreographed "La Guiablesse" to his music, and Katherine Dunham was one of the dancers.

Mexico Interestingly Portrayed in Lecture by a Young Traveler

As travel difficulties increase for the average citizen his wanderlust must be indulged vicariously, therefore, the extraordinary popularity of travel lectures. The Eighth Street theater was besieged last night by a mob as frenzied as any that attends a Horowitz or Lehmann recital when a newcomer to the field, Robert Friers, presented his lecture and film, "Mexican Holiday." Tonight's repetition is sold out, but extra performances will be given on Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday nights of next week.

Young Mr. Friers has an easy and neighborly way of relating his wanderings, and salts his narrative with agreeable dashes of colloquial humor. His films are not all of equal value or interest, as he readily admits, but the best of them provide entertaining glimpses of our exotic fellow nation to the south. Well out of the ordinary are the pictures of the tragic grotto of mummies at Guanajuato, the astonishing desert waterfalls of Juanacatlan, and the masked rain dancers of Cucuchucho.

But most impressive of all are the remarkable shots of the two year old volcano at Paracutin and its attendant desolation, which makes the destruction of man made wars seem puerile. The spectacle of the rolling rivers of lava and the six mile high pillar of fire is inclined to deflate any swollen human ego, but it provides an absorbing half hour with Mr. Friers as an enthusiastic guide. A. G.

Turnips and carrots are plentiful and economical foods nowadays, but few families eat enough of them. One difficulty is that most housewives know only a few ways to prepare each vegetable. They boil or mash the turnips and serve the carrots fresh or boiled.

Both these vitamin and mineral rich vegetables can be glorified into a great variety of tempting and delicious dishes. Try some of the following recipes, and you'll find that no encouragement will be needed to get your family to eat these vegetables.

Turnip Croquettes
[Serves Eight]

2 cups mashed turnips
3 tablespoons bread crumbs
3 tablespoons grated cheese
3 tablespoons chopped peanuts
2 eggs, slightly beaten
3 tablespoons margarine
Salt and pepper to taste

Combine turnips, bread crumbs, peanuts, cheese, eggs, and 1 tablespoon of melted margarine. Mix well and shape into patties. Brown in remaining margarine about 5 minutes on each side.

Glazed Turnip Balls
[Serves Four]

1 pound turnips
3 tablespoons margarine
3 tablespoons corn sirup
3 tablespoons chopped parsley

Cook pared turnips in boiling, salted water until barely tender. Then cut with a French ball cutter. Combine the margarine and corn sirup in a skillet and, when well blended, add the turnip balls. Cook slowly until turnips are glazed, turning frequently. When ready to serve, sprinkle with the chopped parsley.

Turnip and Carrot Luncheon Loaf

3 medium sized carrots
2 cups cooked, sieved turnips
½ teaspoon salt
Pepper
½ cup top milk
4 stiffly beaten egg whites
Nutmeg

Slice carrots one-fourth inch thick and cook until tender in boiling, salted water. Grease a loaf pan and arrange the cooked carrot slices in a layer on the bottom and sides. Add salt, pepper, and top milk to sieved turnips. Fold stiffly beaten egg whites into this and season with nutmeg, if desired. Turn into the pan lined with carrots and bake in a shallow pan of hot water at 350 degrees for about 40 minutes. Unmold and serve in slices with a creamy meat gravy.

Crunchy Carrots
[Serves Six]

6 medium carrots, cooked
2 tablespoons melted margarine
1½ cups crushed cornflakes
¼ teaspoon salt
1/16 teaspoon pepper
1/16 teaspoon paprika

Roll whole cooked carrots in melted margarine, then in crushed cornflakes. Season with salt, pepper, and paprika and place in shallow tray under moderate broiler until golden brown, about 10 minutes.

Fats of Fish Acceptable for Salvage, Cooks Told

In answer to inquiries Mrs. Walter J. Kelly, director of waste fat salvage, yesterday assured housewives that fats from fish are acceptable for salvage. "All kinds of fats," she emphasized, "have some glycerin content that can be salvaged for war use." The question of fish fat arose from the meat shortage in which housewives accustomed to saving fryings found they had comparatively little meat fat to salvage.

Sally Is Seeking Furnishings for Service Homes

[Sally Joy Brown department activities are sponsored by Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc.]

BY SALLY JOY BROWN

Spring cleaning raises the problem of disposing of good but no longer needed articles which have been cluttering up homes. Therefore, response to the following requests will help solve a double problem by placing such articles at the disposal of service men's families:

Mrs. B. writes: "Shortly after my husband's death my son entered the army and is now overseas. It is most difficult for me to keep up my little place and care for an invalid brother on the $50 allowance I receive each month. Trying to replace a few of the household possessions destroyed by fire has been a long and not too successful struggle. We need so many things, but if you will help me obtain some curtains and drapes I will be very thankful."

Mrs. R. writes: "My social worker referred me to you. My husband is in the navy. We have three youngsters under 5 years old whose food and milk must be safeguarded against spoilage. I will appreciate your help in locating an icebox." The address is on the north side.

From Mrs. O.: "My husband is in the army and my only other living relative is a brother who is serving overseas. My 2 year old son and I have been living with my husband's people, but their household is very large and the conditions overcrowded. For the sake of my little boy's health and our happiness I must find other quarters. I hope you will be able to find furniture for a three room flat."

Journey Underground

(The story of a Chicago hero's escape from German occupied France)

(Copyright: 1945: By The Chicago Tribune.)

By Flight Officer David G. Prosser

INSTALMENT XXXVI.

Our trip in the Paris subway was uneventful. We made two or three changes en route. The Paris subway stations, which on the outer part of the city are slightly above ground, have a very sinister appearance with a few blue lights. German uniforms took on a rather fearful color in them.

We arrived at the Gare d' Austerlitz about an hour before the appointed time. This seemed a little foolish to me. We were exposed enough, but to be exposed for a whole hour around a railway station seemed to be a little too much. Mme. Andre, however, said this had occurred because of the danger of an air raid which might have held us up. All Metro trains stop running during a raid, and for an hour afterward.

We took up a position near a ticket box, by which every one walking to and from the subway had to pass. I felt a little uneasy in the obvious place, and wanting to smoke anyway, I asked Mme. Andre if we could not go outside where we could not be observed smoking in our American fashion, which we had been told could betray us to a shrewd policeman.

Madame agreed to our going out for a walk.

We walked around the station and up a boulevard a short distance. Paris seemed to be very shabby in spite of the absence of air raid damage.

Before going down into the station again Mme. Andre said that we must do nothing but follow the guide—no questions. "You always ask too many questions, Claud," she said.

The Belgian madame who had aided us before was waiting for us, looking just as gaudy as always with her pompadour, vermilion lips and nails, chic dress, and an abundance of jewels.

There were two boys in the corner by a gigantic map showing all the Metro lines of Paris in colored lights. The boys looked quite American, in spite of their French dress and berets. An elderly looking man was hovering over them.

Mme. Andre led us over to the corner so we could talk to the boys. I did not like the idea of having a little sewing circle right there in the Metro, speaking English as the S. S. troops, police, and numerous civilians walked by. The boys spoke much too loudly.

They wanted to know what group I had been with and whom I knew—the inevitable army conversation. We had no mutual friends, so that first phase of the conversation soon died down. Herk was rather shyly standing off to one side, and as I was not particularly keen on conversing at this moment, I did not call him over, but the other two did. The three were all quickly engaged in comparing training and combat experience, with a special interest in mutual friends.

Then a comparison of hosts began. It appeared that these boys had been with the little man now talking to the women, who had a big hand in the black market. They ate steak, chicken, and all the most marvelous food, and had everything to drink that they could wish. They frequently went to the cinema and always went fishing with their host on Sundays.

After we had been standing there about 15 minutes the Belgian madame came over to tell us the disappointing news that we were not going away. "Probably next week sometime, but tonight it is quite impossible," she said.

This was truly disheartening, particularly for Herk. We had been so near liberation and yet were still so far.

We Americans were disconsolately silent. Every one's mind was on the train going south, and how wonderful it would have been to be on it and feel that the end of this perpetual fear of being caught by the Germans was over, and that prison camp was no longer a possibility.

Finally Mme. Andre came over and said that we should go now. No words would have been more welcome, for our nervousness seemed to increase while we were standing next to the map, with all the different people walking by. There was no place to sit in the subway trains on the way back, and the trains were slow. It seemed that on Sunday nights there was not much transportation.

There were some fine looking German officers on the train that night, too. They were the most healthy, handsome, and best dressed officers I had ever seen.

As we neared the Vincennes, the officers and soldiers all seemed to have left the train, leaving us in the company of petite bourgeois—office workers, policemen, postmen, and small trades types. It was a great relief to come to the end of the line and walk for a few minutes after that long stand in the train. Walking was tiring, but for me standing was misery.

I felt it would be a great relief to walk back to the house, but instead we joined the bus line queues. My first ride on this bus line had convinced me that time spent waiting was wasted, and that it would be far quicker to walk, but Mme. Andre thought differently, and there were too many people there to start any sort of argument about the advantages of walking.

Fifteen minutes went by and still no bus came. By this time I had managed to whisper twice to Madame, "Why not walk?" but she only smiled and said "No, we shall wait." Another 15 minutes went by before the bus arrived, and then there was a mad scramble to board it. Many people scrambled around the barrier, so that by the time we were about to step on, it looked as if we wouldn't make it. There was a moment of suspense, but finally we just managed to squeeze aboard.

About a quarter of the way home the bus stopped. The driver made vigorous attempts to start it and at first it seemed he was having a little success. The bus jumped and jerked ahead about 25 yards; after that all forward motion ceased. My intuition made me feel we would go no farther, and I tried to signal to Madame, who by that time had found a seat and was engaged in conversation with another woman. She assured me that the bus would start, and immediately became engrossed in her conversation again.

Herk and I were squashed right in the center of the bus. With my woolen shirt I was very warm and rather faint. With a great effort I worked my way over to the window where I could get all the fresh air I needed, and could lean on the window bar to take the weight off my feet.

I could also see that the bus people were devoting most of their efforts to arguing among themselves. It was all too obvious that nothing was going to be done that could make this bus function again.

Once more I signaled to Madame, but I could not attract her attention. Meanwhile I had turned around, and a woman had pushed herself halfway into my place. After I had got another "No" from Madame, and turned around to take full advantage of my half place, this woman started a campaign to take all my territory.

She was so determined and aggressive that it appeared the only way I could stop her was by brute force of some sort. Being uncertain of the fighting qualities of French womanhood, and fearing most of all a scene, I had to give way and return to the warm center of the bus. At this point my irritation could only be calmed by action, so I went to Madame and whispered "Allons." to which she replied "No" again. I decided at least to work my way toward the back of the bus, hoping she would feel forced to go. Because of my painful ankle and the stuffy air I was feeling almost ill at this point. Just as I started several other people had lost patience and began to file out so Mamade came with her newly acquired friend.

We still had a half an hour's walk Herk and I followed the two women. Of course, we could not say a word for fear the strange woman might have guessed our identity. When she finally turned off to her house, I asked Mme. Andre if she was an old friend.

"She is just a woman who lives in this area. I never had spoken to her before this evening."

Such incidents occurred time and time again while we were traveling with Mme. Andre. Altho it was the French custom to be fraternal, it seemed to me that she might have avoided becoming involved with other people while on dangerous missions in the Paris Metro.

As we neared the house, Madame said that she would not come in, but would go right home. "I am very tired—this completes my third return trip to Paris today."

This tremendous activity of hers made me feel a little guilty in having been so irritable in the bus. I could hardly imagine how any one could make that tiring trip more than once a day. Strength and courage were indeed great requisites for this work.

We came to the gate of the house and said good night. Madame told us not to despair, for surely the day would come when we would be on our way to the south, probably toward the end of the week.

When we rang the door bell, le Pere Maurice came to the door, gazed at us a moment in amazement, and mumbled "It is you?"

"O, yes," I said, "and the good M. Maurice, I presume?"

Club Is Packed for Alliance Francaise Fete

BY HARRIETT PRIBBLE

Springtime in Normandy scheduled by the Alliance Francaise to blossom forth for its benefit tea and cocktail party in the Casino club, was nipped in the bud yesterday. The branches of apple blossoms and flowering horse chestnuts which had been promised by an ambitious florist were blighted by frost before they could be shipped to Chicago, and so instead of a breath of French countryside, yesterday's guests were treated to a party whose backdrop was wholly American.

There was a definite French flavor, however, to the substantial crowd that packed the little club. Greetings exchanged in French were nearly as numerous as those in English, and a variety of French organizations was represented—the Cercle Francais by its new president, Mrs. Cyril Ward; the French diplomatic service by the new consul general, Jean Viala, and his wife; and the French underground by one of its heroines, Capt. Louise de Mont-Reynaud. The latter wore a trim beige uniform with gold shoulder markings reading "France."

While the party's hostess, Mrs. Robert Hall McCormick, in a feminine black crepe gown banded in lace and a rose colored toque, welcomed the guests, her husband chatted on the sidelines with Hildegarde, the singer, whose all black costume was Parisian in its chic. Mrs. Francis M. Gunn, president of the Alliance, achieved a smart effect by adding an amber choker and earrings and a sprightly hat of salmon and turquoise satin bows to a basic beige wool dress.

Also enjoying the tea and cocktails, the soft dance music, and the interlude of games at 6 p. m. were Miss Elizabeth Day McCormick, Mrs. Walter R. Kirk, Mr. and Mrs. Harold C. Pynchon, Mrs. Neibling Meigs, Mrs. Ralph Winston, Mrs. Edward A. Leight, Miss Carol Fox, making one of her first appearances in public after a bout with chicken pox; Mrs. Alvin W. Jenkinson, Mrs. Russell Hobbs, Mrs. Jacob Baur, and Howard Van Sinderen Tracy.

The party was given to raise money for the children's hospital in Bayeux, Normandy, which was given by a former Alliance president, Mrs. Charles S. Dewey, and dedicated to the Chicago chapter. Mrs. Dewey was unable to attend the party but sent her greetings from Washington, D. C.

Almost every color of the rainbow will be included in the showing of new summer clothes. They may be monotones or combinations of colors as well as materials, but all will be striking in their individuality.

The printed rayon crepe two piece dress in the center is definitely a conversation piece. Imprinted on a red background are tiny packets of ribbon tied letters with little hearts fluttering among the packets. In contrast to the red is a creamy white butcher linen dickey with a high collarless neckline. A cuff around the bottom of the jacket—in front only—is held in place with plastic buttons, which also mark the front closing.

Steel gray is another popular summer color, and the bolero outfit at the right boasts many novelty features. The printed waffle pique vestee, with its brilliant floral designs, fits down snugly over the hips and fastens in back. Short butterfly sleeves are new, and these are cuffed with the print material and trimmed with a large plastic button at the top of each sleeve. A collarless bolero is fastened with two buttons at the high, round neckline. The slim skirt has an inverted plait in front but is straight in back. It also is available in navy and in sizes 9 to 15.

Looking at Hollywood

By Hedda Hopper

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., April 5—I hear Metro will remake "Barretts of Wimpole Street" with Greer Garson, Gregory Peck, and Charles Coburn. I think they'd all do great jobs. Greer's a fine actress, and she's beautiful, too. But I still think it would be a smart producer who'd get Kit Cornell to do the picture of the play she's made famous all over the world. And Kit's in a mood to listen. Don't say I didn't tell you. . . . Constance Collier goes from a fading prima donna in "Week-end at the Waldorf" to the keeper of a boarding house in Paulette Goddard's next. . . . Fred MacMurray's leading lady, Marguerite Chapman, came to work the other day with a picture he'd sent her when she was a fan of his but still in high school. Written on it was "Hope you go far in your career." . . . Henry Ginsberg bought "The Forgotten Friday" about a man who loses consciousness Thursday, comes to on Saturday. Sounds to me like a sequel to "Lost Week-end." Dick Sale wrote it and Henry will produce.

They Couldn't Wait

Before Ed Gardner could open up a Duffy's Tavern here, he learned that the boys in San Quentin had one there. . . . Our comics are going mad trying to find new writers. Well, fellows, there's a honey up in San Quentin. He's been there five years, has 10 more to go. Works over every gag he's ever seen in a column, magazine, or heard over the air. He's compiled them into a book. It's for sale. I'm told it's something. What more natural than to gag it when you've got time on your hands?

For Home Consumption

British newspapers always lambast their own much more than we ever do, and to prove it, here's an excerpt from the Evening Standard of March 10 commenting on "Tonight and Every Night": "The blitz scenes are a little odd but better than most, and have some understanding of London life. The director, Mr. Victor Saville, was called to an appointment in Hollywood shortly before the outbreak of the war. So he's been a little handicapped by his lack of first hand knowledge in screening these events." Ouch! now if I'd written that, I would have been called—well, what? . . . Bess Lewis celebrated 25 years as Mary Pickford's secretary. . . . Since the picture "Hollywood Canteen" and Warner Brothers were criticized because there were so few movie stars at the canteen, they've bestirred themselves, and now Saturday nights there are very gay indeed, with the aid of Bette Davis.

Mad Meltons Here Again

The Gene Raymonds cracked out with a small dinner for the Jimmy Meltons Saturday. Jeanette and her husband attended the one given by Verbena Hebbard a few nights ago. All the Meltons' old and dear friends attended—the Leonard Firestones [Leonard used to carry Mrs. Melton's books to school in Akron, O.], Atwater Kent, Cliff Henderson, Walter Pidgeons, and Jimmy McHugh told me that long before Jimmy started singing, he tooted a saxophone in making records; also that Jan Peerce of the Met, used to play the violin in the Hotel Astor orchestra. Famous Roxy went thru the room one day while Jan was fiddling and singing. He stopped to listen, went over and said, "Come to my office tomorrow." That was the end of his fiddling and beginning of his singing. Wish our studios had a talent scout like Roxy. He always took chances. . . . Overheard at the farmers' market: "Any blue points today? How many points?" asked the buyer. "There ain't no pernts for ersters," said the clerk. . . . Harold Adamson swears he saw this on back of a newlyweds' car: "Result of loose talk."

'Hotel Berlin' at Least Is a Timely Movie

Produced by Warner Brothers, directed by Peter Godfrey, featuring Faye Emerson, Helmut Dantine, Raymond Massey, Andrea King, Peter Lorre, Alan Hale, George Coulouris, Henry Daniell, Peter Whitney, Helene Thimig, Steven Geray, Kurt Kreuger, Paul Ander, Erwin Kalser, and Dickie Tyler, and presented at the Roosevelt.

By Mae Tinée

One of the best things about "Hotel Berlin" is the timing. Its release is just about perfect right now when our planes are thundering over the German capital and the day of reckoning is fast approaching for the self-appointed master race. It is certain that some of the scenes depicted in the film are taking place in actuality and quite possible that in another month the tale it tells will be past history [I hope, I hope].

Service isn't good in the luxury Hotel Berlin for a number of reasons—a citizenry trying desperately to flee to safer spots, constant air raids, plus the presence of an underground leader who has escaped from a concentration camp and the goose-stepping Gestapo in search of him.

The numerous characters include a general who took part in a coup against the Austrian corporal, as he scornfully refers to Hitler, and has received permission to do away with himself rather than have SS troops do it for him; his favorite fraulein, an actress who is primarily interested in salvaging her own well-groomed hide; many military and strong arm boys, and members of the underground. The plot is lurid and tangled, but most of the acting is good and some of the dialog far better than average.

Peter Lorre's hunt for a "good German" is very funny, and so is Steven Geray's performance as a harassed elderly room clerk with bad feet, whose troubles are topped off by a notice that he has been drafted. Faye Emerson plays a pert blonde who lives by her wits and the favors of a high ranking Nazi, and she gives far more to her role than does Andrea King as the actress.

Helmut Dantine is thin and desperate looking as the hunted Martin Richter, but Raymond Massey just didn't seem quite the type for a German general. I thought Helene Thimig outstanding as a worn and worried Jewish woman who dares to leave the segregated district to seek help for a dying husband.

Effective direction does a lot for a plot as complicated as the Chinese situation, and, while I couldn't find it exactly gripping, it's lavishly dressed melodrama with a number of good moments.

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
1 diamond	1 spade	2 clubs	Pass
2 no trump	3 spades	3 no trump	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead, eight of spades.

The player who concentrates his attention exclusively on the 26 cards during the handling of the dummy is fighting without full equipment. While the text book will furnish the guide to correct management of certain combinations of cards, nevertheless information obtained during the bidding should frequently induce you to depart from standard methods because you believe certain cards to be held by certain adversaries.

Whenever I am consulted as to the proper way to play a hand I never answer until I have first inquired as to the sequence of bids that led to the final contract. Even vital clew. When the bidding points an opponent's silence may be the to one player's possession of a key card the hand should generally be played on the theory that it is so placed. However, too much must not be taken for granted and if there is a sure way to make the hand, even tho the particular opponent lacks that card, obviously too much reliance must not be placed on the enemy.

In today's hand East took too much for granted to his own downfall. South's bid of three spades ranks as a major atrocity, but unfortunately received no punishment. The eight of spades was opened and declarer went right up with the king. He was quite confident that South's repeated bids indicated that he held the king of clubs. He returned to his hand and took the club finesse. When it failed he was defeated two tricks.

That South held the king of clubs was probable, indeed, but there was no guarantee to that effect. That he held six spades was a moral certainty. Declarer should, therefore, have refused to take his spade trick until such time that North had no more of the suit, just in case he happened to have the king of clubs. The proper play, therefore, was to duck the spade lead from both hands. The suit would be continued and established by South, but now the club finesse could be taken with complete relaxation. North would win with the king and return a heart. A quick movement of the wrist will cause the ace of that suit to fall upon the table and the rest of the tricks are taken in rapid succession.

Had declarer's spade stopper been the ace instead of the king-queen, he would not have dreamt of taking the first trick. After all, what was the difference here?

[Mr. Goren will answer bridge questions sent to The Tribune if a self-addressed stamped envelope is inclosed.]

WANTED: HOME FOR BROOKLYN FOOTBALL CLUB

National League to Open Session Today

BY EDWARD PRELL
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

New York, April 5—Tomorrow may be the day the Brooklyn Tigers, so homeless they haven't even a tree under which to shelter themselves, may find a new place for their National Football league endeavors.

The plight of Capt. Dan Topping's professional eleven has taken precedence over everything else the National leaguers may or may not do in a scheduled three day meeting which opens at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning. Capt. Topping's general manager, Tom Gallery, is carrying the team's fight to be granted Yankee stadium as an operating base, but the New York football Giants' people, the Maras, young Jack and Father Tim, had stubborn chins today when they were spied in informal conferences with other league club owners.

Suspect Rickey's Plans

The Tigers have no home because Branch Rickey, the master of Ebbets field, would not agree to a long term contract. Branch offered the Tigers the park for 1945, but the Tigers, suspecting that Mr. Rickey had designs on entering the pro football business in 1946, and in Ebbets field too, decided to seek other quarters.

This even was before Topping had teamed up with Larry MacPhail and Del Webb to buy the New York Yankee baseball interests. Thus the Maras have it in their power to decide whether or not Topping's team can play in his own ball park—Yankee stadium.

Under ordinary circumstances the Maras would quickly say no, but the circumstances are far from ordinary. On the post-war horizon are at least two leagues which plan to operate in New York. The Maras and their National league associates know that the decision boils down to this: If they refuse to let the Tigers move into Yankee stadium, the Tigers will withdraw from the league and join the All-America conference.

Compromise Is Likely

It is believed that a compromise arrangement will be worked out in which the Tigers will make a financial settlement. The Giants are a valuable sports property now after having been built up wisely for more than two decades.

If a rival enters New York it perhaps will cut down the value of the Giants. The Tigers also, perhaps, could operate more cheaply in their own stadium than do the Giants in the Polo Grounds, where they pay the customary 15 per cent rental. This Brooklyn problem is so knotty that one National leaguer said the Giants' official family is divided on it.

Player Draft First Business

The order of business calls for the annual player draft to start at 10 a. m. Once the 11 teams have gone thru the formality of staking out negotiating claims for from 20 to 30 college graduates each, the program calls for Gallery, as Topping's representative, to bring up the matter of Yankee stadium tenancy. It is likely that all the owners will be asked to speak their piece by Elmer Layden, league commissioner, who is starting on the fifth year of his five year contract.

As for the player draft, collegians who have played only their sophomore year will be eligible for the plucking under a rule instituted last year by the league. This would apply to an athlete who left for military service after his sophomore year, and whose class now has been graduated.

Rule Will Reduce Bidding

If boys now in uniform who have eligibility remaining in college are drafted by the pro leaguers, they become individual cases. Whether an athlete will play professional football will be determined after consideration by the team drafting him, his college athletic director, the league commissioner, and the boy himself. The National league feels that this rule is a break for the colleges. Instead of all their teams being after the same boy, just one has the negotiating rights, thus reducing the talent traffic.

The National league delegates declare they are too busy to give any official thought to the shadow cast by rival leagues which have been organized.

May Have 10 Teams

"We have too much business of our own," said one club official, "to

In the WAKE of the NEWS

BY ARCH WARD

THE character of post-war professional football quite likely will be determined in the next two weeks. . . . The National Football league today in New York opens one of the most important meetings in its history. . . . Two weeks from today the All-America conference directors will assemble in Chicago. . . . There no longer can be any doubt that there will be competition for patronage in the post-graduate game once the Japs lay down their arms. . . . The All-America league, despite the sniping and vaporings of grouch columnists, is here to stay and the National league knows it. . . . They either will get together and work out their conflicts or they will slug it out with greenbacks. . . . It will not take long to make the diehards see the light. . . . The time is not distant when there will be a real world's championship game in professional football instead of the nonsensical East-West contest which now determines the National league winner. . . . Major interest in the New York meeting centers in the status of Capt. Dan Topping's Brooklyn Tigers. . . . The club was invited to leave Ebbets field by Branch Rickey and Topping meanwhile has become part owner of Yankee stadium. . . . He wants to operate his football team in his own park, but must get the consent of Tim Mara's New York Giants, who have territorial rights. . . . This department believes a deal will be made but, if complications develop, Topping's team immediately will seek membership in the All-America.

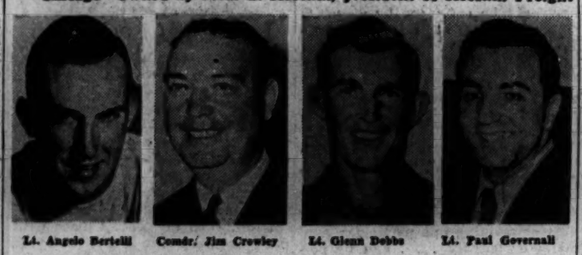
The National league is confronted with competition from a conference which already has granted seven franchises. . . . Three or four other applicants are asking admission. . . . Here's the way the All-America lines up:

New York—Owned by Lt. Comdr. Mal Stevens, former Yale and New York U. coach; Charley Grimes, New York attorney; Barclay and Robert Cook, former Yale football players, and William D. Cox, lumberman. New York has Lt. Glenn Dobbs, Ensign Bill Daley, Jack Russell, and Martin Ruby under contract. Stevens will coach the team, which will play its games in Triboro stadium, capacity, 48,000.

Chicago—Owned by John L. Keeshin, president of Keeshin Freight



Lt. Angelo Bertelli | Comdr. Jim Crowley | Lt. Glenn Dobbs | Lt. Paul Governali

Lines. The club has a 10 year lease on Soldiers' field, capacity, 100,000, and has engaged Lt. Col. Dick Hanley and Maj. Ernie Nevers as coaches. Ten players, including some of the most widely known names in midwest football, have been signed.

Cleveland—Owned by Arthur McBride, taxicab magnate, and Ray T. Miller, former mayor of Cleveland. Club has lease on Municipal stadium, capacity, 83,000. Lt. Paul Brown is head coach and general manager. Brown has signed John Brickels as his assistant and has several famous players, including Otto Graham of Northwestern and Creighton Miller and Herb Coleman of Notre Dame, under contract.

Miami—This organization is headed by Harvey Hester, retired business man. He has exclusive rights to pro games in the Orange bowl stadium. Hester has lined up Lt. Comdr. Jack Meagher of Iowa Pre-Flight and Ensign Hampton Pool, formerly of the Chicago Bears, as coaches. He has signed 25 players, including 16 from last year's undefeated Fort Pierce navy team.

Buffalo—Owned by Sam Cordovano, president of the Globe Construction company, and James Bruell, president of the Frontier Oil company. Cordovano, former Georgetown player and later assistant to Lou Little at Columbia, will coach the team. They have eight players, including Columbia's Paul Governali, on the dotted line. The club has rights to Buffalo's Municipal stadium, capacity, 53,000.

Los Angeles—Owned by Don Ameche, star of screen and radio, and Christy Walsh, former newspaper syndicate owner. They have signed, among others, Angelo Bertelli, Notre Dame's famed forward passer, who narrowly escaped death in the invasion of Iwo Jima. Los Angeles is negotiating with two of the leading coaches on the coast. The club expects to play in the Coliseum, capacity, 103,000.

San Francisco—Owned by A. J. [Tony] Morabito, president of the Lumber Terminal company, and William Turre, vice president of the Webb Construction company of Phoenix, Ariz. Del Webb is a partner of Topping and MacPhail in Yankee stadium. Buck Shaw of Santa Clara will coach the team, which will play in Kezar stadium, capacity, 60,000.

O, yes, and a fellow named Jimmy Crowley, now a navy commander serving in the Pacific, is the commissioner of the All-America conference at a salary of $25,000 a year for five years.

Maybe, as some contemporaries inform their readers, it's just a newspaper league thought up one day by a sports editor with lots of time on his hands. But, brother, it doesn't look that way to the men who already have poured hundreds of thousands of dollars into the venture.

Ten Years Ago Today—Italy picked a Golden Gloves team to box in Chicago. . . . Gabby Hartnett's double in the ninth inning gave the Cubs a 3 to 2 victory over the Washington Senators.

HARRY W. SMITH, SPORTSMAN AND INVENTOR, DIES

Worcester, Mass., April 5 (AP)—Harry Worcester Smith, 79, internationally known sportsman, inventor, and master of many great hunts in the United States, died today. Smith was the first American to be master of an Irish hunt and took the first American foxhounds to Great Britain.

As an inventor he obtained 30 patents on an automatic color weaving loom which revolutionized the manufacture of ginghams.

Smith once saw a horse pulling a street car in this city. He bought him, named him The Cad, and trained him. In 1900 he won the $10,000 Calverts steeplechase at Baltimore, Md., with him.

FORMER TIGER BOLSTERS CLUB AT FIRST BASE

Dykes Cheered by Hurlers' Showing

BY IRVING VAUGHAN
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Terre Haute, Ind., April 5—Despite cold weather and distractions such as loud words loosely tossed by a seemingly ill humored Jim Dykes, the White Sox resumed with their training routine on their local lot today. The expectation was that Dykes would follow up his sweeping 8 to 0 victory over the Tigers yesterday with a cheering broadcast that he finally possesses a first baseman who owns his own glove for that particular position and that the acquisition would be formally unveiled at the first opportunity.

The acquisition — Joe Orengo—really is here and worked out today but the little manager intends to withhold him as a secret weapon at least until after ahe opener here Saturday of the four game series with the Tigers.

Joe Needs Some Work

Altho the Sox publicity department wasn't functioning in its usual jolly fashion, it was learned that Dykes' real reason for not rushing Orengo, taken in trade from the pennant contending Tigers last December, into the lineup against his former mates is that the player is in need of additional physical prepping. He played some baseball on the west coast during the winter but apparently not enough, so when he wasn't batting today, he loitered around third base, which he also plays, and Bill Nagel continued to keep an eye on first base.

It also was learned that along with keeping Nagel at first, the little manager intends to open against the Tigers here Saturday with about the same lineup he employed yesterday with such unexpected success. This means Leroy Schalk at second, Cass Michaels at short, Tony Cuccinello at third, Guy Curtright in left, Johnny Dickshot in center and Wally Moses in right. This layout, of course, will be altered when Outfielder Oris Hockett and Shortstop Dan Reynolds, both prospective regulars, shake off their leg injuries.

The Pitchers Are Ready

The ease with which Bill Dietrich, Ed Lopat, and Joe Haynes deceived the Tigers yesterday was fairly convincing proof that the Sox mound staff is in pretty sound shape with about ten days more work coming up before the season opens. Other members of the corps are equally fit, at least there are no sore arms, so the manager is not going to be embarrassed trying to find enough to go round in the Tiger series. The lone exception is Thornton Lee, who was set back by a cold.

Even Johnny Humphries, who drilled with his mates for the first time today, expects to be ready for a limited whirl against the Tigers in the Monday or Tuesday games. With Humphries on hand, Dykes has eight potential starters, not allowing for what he might dig out of the spring grabbag eventually, so in at least one respect he should be happy.

A delegate from the Little Rock club was on hand today to see what Dykes might plan to pass along to him later, but so far as is known no decision was reached.

BOSS SAYS COME HOME SO HAGG'S IN HURRY AT LAST

New York, April 5 [Special]—All reports that he would be around for outdoor competition this spring to the contrary, Gunder Hagg will sail or fly for Sweden at the earliest possible time.

That was made known today when Gunder's Swedish boss, a haberdashery owner, intimated that the man power situation there is critical in issuing a hurry up call for his star salesman and good will ambassador to come home. He speculated that it might take a week longer than originally anticipated for Hagg to get across but would allow no more leeway and Gunder, who reportedly has a lucrative three year contract, is anxious to accede.

Haakon Lidman, Hagg's traveling companion and interpreter, has no pressing tieups in Sweden and will remain here at least thru the Penn relays in late April. He definitely will compete in the special meet at Endicott, R. I., tomorrow night.

SPORTS CHIEFS TO AIR VIEWS ON 'BAN BOXING' BILL

BY FRANK MASTRO

State Rep. Ragnar G. Nelson [R., Chicago], chairman of the Illinois house license and miscellany committee, tonight will preside at a hearing on a bill to prohibit, during war time, boxing and wrestling bouts involving prizes and admission fees.

The meeting will convene at 8 p. m. in the state athletic commission in the Steger building.

Sheldon Clark, head of the athletic board, invited all licensed promoters to the hearing, including Arthur Wirtz, vice president of Chicago Stadium; Irving Schoenwald and Jack Begun, Marigold Gardens; Fred Kohler, Rainbo Fronton and White City, and Leo Seltzer, Coliseum.

Granata Bill's Patron

Clark will be unable to attend because of an out of town business appointment, but his commission's case will be ably handled by Commissioners Lt. Gen. Roy D. Keehn and Harry Scranton.

The measure, which was introduced in the house last month by Rep. Peter C. Granata [R., Chicago], is unpopular among service men as well as fans.

The five man house committee, in addition to Nelson, includes James A. Adduci [R., Chicago] and Michael A. Ruddy [R., Chicago]. Adduci and Ruddy are known to favor the bill. Adduci once sponsored boxing matches in the Park Casino on the west side.

Clark Would See Green

Before leaving for Los Angeles several days ago, Clark said repeal of what he called a nuisance measure should be reported by the committee. If the bill is reported favorably he said he would see Gov. Green about it.

"This bill interferes with the war effort," Clark said. "Service men have told me it is uncalled for because both sports are morale builders in all branches of the service."

George Gainsford, manager of Ray [Sugar] Robinson, before leaving for New York yesterday, said his protege has canceled proposed bouts against Jack Lamotta in Chicago Stadium May 11 and Jose Basora in Philadelphia May 14.

Amateur boxing shows will be held tonight in Madison Athletic club, 4711 Madison st., and Chicago Boys' club, 3400 S. Emerald av. Robert Cotton, Indianapolis sectional Golden Gloves middleweight champion, who was a member of the Chicago intercity team, will appear in a five round bout against William Coleman of the Savoy A. C. in the Madison arena. A five round co-feature will bring together Leroy Scales, city Golden Gloves light heavyweight title holder, and Johnny Farrell, Elgin.

Representatives of the Chicago Boys' club and the Libertyville Boys' club will meet in approximately 17 contests.

North Av. Y Team Will Compete in A.A.U. Volleyball

The North Av.-Larrabee Y. M. C. A. volleyball squad, winner of the National Y. M. C. A. Open championship in 1941 and 1942, is polishing up its passes and adding more power to its spiking these days as it looks forward to playing in the National A. A. U. tournament in Minneapolis April 20. At least 10 of the nation's best teams in this indoor sport are expected to enter.

The North Av. team is certain to be one of the top contenders on the basis of its record, tho it has not had any national competition since it won the last open tournament in St. Paul in 1942.

As a preliminary to the A. A. U. meet in Minneapolis, the North Av. squad will play in the Illinois class A state tournament tomorrow on its home court. Tho the competition from some Chicago rivals will be keen, the host association's board of strategy, including F. C. Martini and other veteran volleyball enthusiasts, will be surprised if the state title gets away from their team.

A squad of 11 players from the North Av. Y. has been entered in the national meet and from their ranks the starting team of six men will be chosen. Five players, William Alton, Spartico Anzuini, Harold Wendt, Richard Caplan, and Leonard Sieben, have been named on All-American teams in other years. Other squad members are Walter Brown, playing coach; Bill Stratton, Joe Dennenberg, Jim Linehan, Lawrence Spejcher, and Melvin Spejcher.

Detroit Host Tonight in 1st Cup Contest

Detroit, Mich., April 5 (AP)—Detroit's Red Wings and Toronto's Maple Leafs, Stanley cup opponents for the second time in four years, open the National Hockey league's world series here tomorrow night.

The Red Wings, by virtue of their second place finish in the league's regular season and their record of eight victories in 10 games with the Leafs, may rule a slight favorite over the third place Toronto team.

Leafs Have the Experience

But offsetting this is the Leafs' feat of eliminating the league and Stanley cup champion, Montreal's Canadiens, in their play-off semi-final series, 4 games to 2, while the Red Wings were being extended to seven games by the fourth place Boston Bruins.

Toronto will have an edge over the Wings in Stanley cup experience, with no less than eight players who were with the Leafs' 1942 cup winning team which beat Detroit in a seven game series, dropping the first three games and then winning the next four. Six of the present Detroit players were with the Wings' last Stanley cup winner, in 1943.

Wings After Fourth Cup

The Red Wings are confident they will wind up the series with their fourth Stanley cup victory. They won the cup series in 1936, 1937, and 1943. Adding to this confidence was the prospect that versatile Syd Howe, veteran center injured early in the Boston series, would return to action tomorrow night. During the regular season Howe was the leading point maker against Toronto. Altho he scored only two goals, he set up 10 other goals by his teammates.

GOLDEN GLOVES TIE LEAVES BOTH SQUADS HAPPY

BY CHARLES BARTLETT

The 18th Intercity Golden Gloves competition in the Chicago Stadium Wednesday night, resulting in a thrilling 8-8 tie, fourth of the series, yesterday found both the New York and Chicago teams in a happy mood as the soldiers, marines, war workers and teen age kids wended their homeward way after one of the most dramatic conclusions to the long feud between the two cities.

For the benefit of the 20,752 fans who witnessed the stirring show, it should be told now that New York's coaches—Teddy Martin, Pete Mello, and George Gainford—admitted that the final and decisive bout of the big party was all Chicago. That was due to the consistent drive of Corp. Adolfo Quijano, captain of the Chicago team as he won a decision over Roland La Starza, the Manhattan collegian who had proved himself as an alternate last year and then had come on to win the easterners' 175 pound title this year.

Squads Evenly Matched

The band of New Yorkers entrained for home yesterday afternoon in the La Salle st. station, heading east with the knowledge that Chicago's coaches—Capt. Johnny Behr, Fred Caserio, Issy Kline, Pop Howard, Dick Fitzpatrick, and Eddie Nichols—had matched New York's novel training program at the Bear Mountain inn by producing the sort of squad which has shown what training does not only in Intercity but also in international and Olympic matches.

The New Yorkers admitted that Quijano won his battle from La Starza off the second round right which stalled the New York collegian. The only decision they questioned was that which gave Corp. John Harding of Fort Leonard Wood, Mo., an edge over Jim White, New York Negro heavyweight alternate. They thought that White had won the fight, but the official cards of the two judges and the referee disagreed with them, as did the crowd, which had seen the Missouri soldier, a natural 175 pounder, punish his New York opponent in the second round.

Crosley, Baylark Come Thru

The Chicago team found itself powered by two victories it really did not anticipate. The first of these was the work of the oldest man on either team, Bob Crosley of Fort Wayne, and the second the most determined job of the big evening, turned in by Luke Baylark of the Savoy Athletic club. Big Luke lost his fight in Madison Square Garden as a Chicago alternate last year and was the unhappiest member of the 1944 cast when he lost that decision. However, the popular Negro didn't give up. He went into extra-curricular training this season and punctuated that by the greatest body barrage of the program as he rifled a dynamite laden right to Jerry Conway's midsection. Jerry, who had, up to the moment, matched Baylark's body blows, sagged to the floor in the last minute of the first round.

Crosley, 31, and the father of three children, fought in the Chicago Tournament of Champions as a lightweight. Grateful for the chance to fight New York, Robert slimmed down to the featherweight stage. He went on from there to prove his right to box in the first bout of the night. The Hoosier then verified his early efforts by pounding Jackie Pembridge into submission with the finest all-around contribution of the Chicago side.

BY EDWARD BURNS
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

French Lick, Ind., April 5—The Cubs whipped the Cincinnati Reds, 5 to 0, in their seven inning exhibition opener this afternoon, but there was a slight catch in the triumph—Hod Lisenbee, 44, and Guy Bush, 42, both staging comebacks with the Reds, pitched for the Cubs by special arrangement with Manager Bill McKechnie of the Cincies.

All the runs were made in the first inning at the expense of 17 year old Herman Wehmeier, an American Legion right hander who will leave the Reds Monday to resume his studies in a Cincinnati high school.

Walk Paves the Way

Since all the runs were accomplished in that one inning it may be as well to set down in detail what happened. Here's the inning: Stan Hack walked and went to third on the first of Roy Hughes' three straight singles. Frank Secory fouled to Woody Williams, after which Heinz Becker walked, loading the bases. Andy Pafko forced Becker, Walter Flager to Williams, Hack scoring. Rabbit Garriott walked, again loading the bases. Don Johnson doubled to left, scoring Hughes, Pafko, and Garriott. Mickey Williams also doubled, scoring Johnson with the final run of the afternoon. The big inning ended when Steve Mesner threw out Lissenbee.

The borrowing of two Reds' pitchers in the first game of an exhibition season, 29 days after the Cub reporting date had several implications in itself, but the situation became even dramatic when good, ol', earnest Guy Bush was named as one of the loan pitchers. The Mississippi Mudcat was the pet of thousands of Chicago fans for a decade prior to his swapping to the Pirates in December, 1934.

He's the Same Old Guy

Today he looked not unlike the same eager slat that won the only game the Cubs salvaged in the 1929 world series. He still was pawing around the mound before each pitch and lunging toward third after each cast. He pitched the fifth and sixth and seventh innings, yielding three singles, one of them an infield scratch. He walked one.

Lissenbee had little trouble with his teammates, yielding two singles in the first inning, one with two out in the third and one with two out in the fourth. At times he seemed as good a pitcher as he was with the Senators 'way back in the late '20s. John Orphal, with Birmingham last season, pitched the last three innings against the Cubs and was tapped for two singles. Going in at the start of the fifth, he struck out Phil Cavarretta, first to face him, then Hack and Hughes followed with singles. There were no more hits by the Cubs thereafter.

More Help Is On Way

The shortage of able armed Cub pitchers is expected to be relieved tomorrow when the Cubs and Reds reach Louisville, en route to an exhibition engagement with the Reds at Fort Knox, to be filled tomorrow afternoon. Ray Prim and Jorges Comellas, who won 40 games between them for Los Angeles last year, are due to report in Louisville tomorrow, Prim coming from California and Comellas from Havana. Infielder Johnny Ostrowski and Catcher Dewey Williams, who left the club early this week, are expected to rejoin in Louisville tomorrow.

The impending joining up of pitchers elated Manager Charley Grimm almost as much as the bulletin that the club's vice president, James T. Gallagher, left Chicago to join the team. Whether he has any sports editors in his entourage was not made clear, but even if he arrives alone everybody here will be mighty happy, it's bean that lonesome.

St. Louis Gets Run in 2d on Two Errors

Cape Girardeau, Mo., April 5 (AP)—The St. Louis Browns defeated the Toledo Mudhens, 3 to 1, in their 10th exhibition game today.

The Browns scored in the second when Martin was safe on an error by Thompson, moved to second and third on infield outs and crossed the plate as Whitehead fumbled an easy roller off Mancuso's bat.

St. Louis tallied in the fifth after Mancuso doubled, went to third on Gene Moore's fly and trotted home on Gutteridge's single. In the eighth Kreevich scored from third.

Toledo also scored in the eighth, with Kimble opening the frame with a double, moving to third on an infield out and racing home on a fly.

Milton Byrnes, Browns' right fielder, questioned by his St. Louis draft board on his case which was referred to Washington, was given no information regarding his future prospects.

HUTCHINGS IS IMPRESSIVE

Washington, D. C., April 5 (AP)—Johnny Hutchings, 260 pound right hander, will be given an opportunity to go nine innings in the Boston Braves' next exhibition game with the Washington Senators Saturday in Griffith stadium.

Hutchings held the Senators scoreless for 10 innings in previous four and six inning tricks, and Manager Bob Coleman may set the big fellow up for the American league opening.

Joe Mack, first baseman, and Eddie Joost, infielder who was out of baseball last season while in defense work, joined the squad today, making 28 men in camp. A scheduled game with the Curtis Bay coast guard was canceled because of cold, windy weather.

RAIN BEATS GIANTS

Lakewood, N. J., April 5 (AP)—The New York Giants were rained out of an exhibition game today with the army air base at Fort Dix, their second successive postponement.

Manager Mel Ott said Harry Feldman and either Andy Hansen or Don King would pitch tomorrow against Jersey City in a contest slated for the Lakehurst naval air station.

St. Louis, Mo., April 5 (AP)—Al [Red] Schoendienst, rookie infielder of the St. Louis Cardinals, got a pat on the back today from Manager Billy Southworth, who placed the youngster in left field in his lineup for the spring series game with the St. Louis Browns Saturday.

"When I look at that redhead I just don't feel I've lost Stan Musial," Southworth said. "He swings a bat like Musial and reminds me of Stan in lots of ways."

Outfielder Johnny Hopp and southpaw pitcher Harry Brecheen still are reported holdouts.

A'S ON RAMPAGE

Aberdeen, Md., April 5 (AP)—The Philadelphia Athletics, scoring eight runs in the first inning, defeated the International league Baltimore Orioles, 9 to 6, today in a wind swept game which was halted in the seventh inning.

The executive committee of the league today concluded its session which started yesterday, thus clearing the way for action. Maroon Nine to Open 1945 Season Tomorrow

The first baseball game of the 1945 season for the University of Chicago will be played tomorrow at 2:30 p. m. on Greenwood field with Illinois Tech. So far only a portion of the season's schedule has been drawn up. Other Maroon games include: April 13, Northwestern at Chicago; April 14, Chicago at Northwestern; April 24, Purdue at Chicago; April 28, Illinois Tech. at Chicago; May 22, Chicago at Purdue.

Prep Basket Title Games Tomorrow

Four high school basketball teams, champions in their divisions and leagues, yesterday went thru penultimate drills in preparation for the annual charity double header in Chicago Stadium tomorrow night, with the Chicago prep basketball championships at stake.

The contests, sponsored by Mayor Kelly and with proceeds donated to the Chicago service men's centers, pits the City league junior and senior champions against the champions of the same divisions in the Catholic league.

Senn High school's Bulldogs, who went undefeated in winning the senior title in public school competition, are matched against the St. Philip Gaels, losers of only one contest in winning the parochial school north section title and championship play-off.

Marshall's Hero Again

The Marshall Commandos, who this year resumed their winning ways after their victory streak was stopped last season at 98 straight, meet the Leo Lions of the Catholic league, in the junior contest.

Marshall will be the only team making a repeat performance in the contest. The Commandos have represented the public school juniors since the charity double header was inaugurated three years ago. Last year Weber of the Catholic league defeated Marshall after Parker High school had broken the Commando victory chain. Marshall's record, to date stands at 117 victories in 119 games.

Expect Crowd of 10,000

An attendance of more than 10,000 is expected to witness the contests, with the junior game scheduled to begin at 8 o'clock. The senior contest follows.

The Senn-St. Philip battle is rated as a tossup, with the Bulldogs slated to come back after a disappointing performance at the state tournament in Champaign last month. The Bulldogs, who lost to Moline in the opening round of the state meet, took a lay-off to recover from squad illnesses, many of which were bothering players at the time of the downstate performances. This week, Senn resumed practice, with Coach Harry [Cap] Leighton losing the team captain, Bob David, who suffered an attack of scarlet fever.

Krulewitch Returns

At the same time, the Senn team was strengthened by the return of Larry Krulewitch, instrumental in many of the early season successes, but who was absent from the lineup in the City league title contest against Von Steuben and was not a party to the downstate mishap. Krulewitch's disappearance from the lineup was mysterious, and just as mysterious was his return, but Leighton indicated early this week that the boy would see action tomorrow.

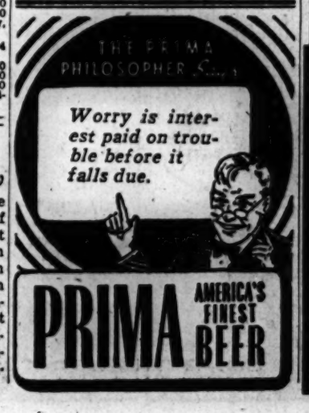
The Gaels from St. Philip lost one game to the Fenwick Friars in winning the north section title, and edged out Leo's Lions, south section champions, in the play-off two week's ago. Guided by Coach Clem Naughton, the St. Philip five is a slight favorite.

HOPPE, COCHRAN EVEN IN DETROIT; CHICAGO BOUND

Cleveland, O., April 5 (AP)—Veteran Willie Hoppe of New York defeated Welker Cochran, world three-cushion billiards champion, 60 to 50 in 39 innings tonight to take the final block here of their cross-country title match. Each won three of the six blocks played here.

By the victory, Hoppe increased his match lead to 90 points. The challenger's total is 1,836; Cochran's, 1,748. They will resume match competition Monday in Chicago.

Cochran won in the fifth block this afternoon 60 to 50 in 43 innings, after triumphing in two blocks yesterday. Hoppe won the first two blocks Tuesday.



NAVY ALL-STAR SPORT TEAMS TO BE BROKEN UP

Washington, D. C., April 5 (AP)—The navy formally ordered today that its all-star athletic teams in this country be broken up for morale purposes with more emphasis on games in battle areas.

This new policy apparently means that some star players will be transferred to the Pacific area to give service men an opportunity to see first class baseball this summer and other sports later. The order applies to all forms of athletics.

The navy order says that it does not favor deliberate concentration of professional or publicly known athletes within the continental United States for the purpose of exploiting their specialties in athletic team competition.

Affects Morale

It added that the morale of the navy will be enhanced by dispersal of well known athletes in routine service with active units, and that their concentration within continental limits is detrimental to general morale and incurs adverse criticism from service people as well as civilians.

"In order to break up aggregations now formed," the order says, "it is directed that no person . . . either officer or enlisted, shall be retained beyond his normal period of duty or training in a particular command or locality . . . and be permitted to coach, play or concern himself with competitive athletics."

TWO SEAHAWKS TRANSFERRED

Iowa City, Ia., April 5 [Special]—The navy's new policy of having its name athletes perform for service men in the battle areas rather than in the United States swung into effect at the Iowa Navy Pre-Flight school today when Ed Weiland, former Chicago White Sox pitcher from Evanston, Ill., and Ned Harris, ex-Detroit Tigers outfielder from Palm Beach, Fla., received orders which will send them to the league being planned under Lt. Bill Dickey in the Pacific theater of war.

IF NO ONE SHOWS UP, CLAPPER WILL PLAY FOR BRUINS

Boston, Mass., April 5 (AP).—Manager Art Ross said Aubrey [Dit] Clapper, Bruin veteran, will be the bench coach of the Boston hockey club next season—with two provisions. Clapper will play if the club lacks four adequate defense men and will serve as a substitute if a regular is injured.

Clapper, 38, has served with the Bruins 18 seasons and has recorded 226 goals, 243 assists, 469 points, and 422 minutes of penalties—excluding play-offs.

Clarence Eilers, forward, was the high scorer with eight baskets and two free throws. Le June, center on the losing team, made eight baskets and one free throw.

Presentation beat St. Gall, 39 to 16, for third place.

Here's Latest Ruling on Ball Players Draft

Washington, D. C., April 5 (AP)—The war department said today that any baseball player "holding a deferment" for working in essential industry is subject to immediate induction if he leaves that job. Regardless of what his physical condition may be, he probably would be inducted, it was pointed out.

However, players in war plants without deferments are subject to only the normal draft procedure, based mainly on physical examinations, if they return to baseball.

Traced to Byrnes Order

The war department made that explanation today in answer to inquiries regarding its attitude toward professional athletes who leave war work to resume their sport. Some baseball people feel that players are being reclassified and inducted in increasing numbers.

"The nub of the situation for a ball player is whether he has been deferred on the basis of working in essential industry," a war department person said. "We are still operating under a months-old directive by James F. Byrnes, then war mobilizer, that anybody leaving a job for which he was deferred shall be picked up immediately," he added.

"No Roundup Drive On"

Selective service said there has been no recent change in its policy or attitude toward professional athletes, and that "no drive is on" to round them up.

It was suggested that ball players go to their local draft boards for determination of their status before leaving war jobs for the diamond. What happens then, in most instances, will depend largely on local conditions.

The war man power commission recently said that ball players may leave war jobs and return to their "principal business," baseball, without going thru WMC's referral program. The war department and selective service said WMC's action has no connection with their phase of the war effort.

Nelson's 64 Tops Field in Atlanta Golf

Atlanta, Ga., April 5 (AP)—Byron Nelson tore the Capital City course to pieces today with a five under par 64 to lead the first round of the Red Cross benefit golf tournament.

Battling against a high wind which sent scores of most of the other pros skyrocketing, Nelson was precision all the way with seven birdies. Two bogies kept him from taking an even longer lead.

Deadlocked for second place with par 69s were the other two big money winners of the winter circuit, Sammy Snead of Hot Springs, W. Va., and Jug McSpaden of Sanford, Me. Snead continued the erratic putting which cost him dearly in three Carolina tournaments recently.

Nelson, leading the tour with seven tournaments won to date against six for Snead, shot a 32 on each nine. Long drives, sharp approaches, and accurate putting featured the Toledo star's play thruout. A 45 foot putt for a birdie three on No. 15, a 425 yarder, was the highlight.

Ed Dudley, Professional Golfers association president, and Orville White, Winston-Salem, N. C., stayed in the running with 70s.

NATIONAL A. A. U. SWIM OPENS IN NEW YORK TODAY

New York, April 5 (AP)—Announcement by the Bainbridge naval training center today that the Commodore team would not compete left Ohio State's N. C. A. A. title holders favorite to win the National A. A. U. men's senior indoor swimming meet tomorrow and Saturday.

Bainbridge officials made no further comment, but the action followed a statement by a navy department spokesman in Washington yesterday that there is a general practice to "break up all-star teams and get those boys into the war."

Will Keep Kiefer Out

Ensign Adolph Kiefer, backstroke specialist and world record holder from Bainbridge, said several days ago the Commodores would win the A. A. U. team title by "at least 10 points." Kiefer, who has won 26 United States titles and been beaten but once in dorsal races over a 10 year period, had expected to compete.

However, numerous other champions and strong pretenders were listed to compete, including Alan Ford of Columbia, midshipman, holder of the world record for the 100 yard free style; Keo Nakama and Hobie Billingsley, Ohio State, and Gene Rogers, Columbia.

Ford won five National A. A. U. titles while at Yale, where he completed his V-12 program. He entered Columbia midshipmen's school less than a month ago.

Batterman Ruled Out

One of the largest and most interesting entry lists in its 60 year history—155 individuals and 23 relay teams—had been named for the meet in the New York A. C.'s 75 foot pool. Five events are scheduled for each day, with qualifying trials in the afternoon and finals at night.

Charles Batterman of Washington, who last season won the high and low board diving titles, must pass up the approaching competition because he is a physical education teacher at Bladensburg, Md., High school. This, said A. A. U. Secretary-Treasurer Dan Ferris yesterday, makes Batterman a professional.

CIRCUS BARKERS HELP JANIRO TO CRASH BIG TIME

New York, April 5 (AP)—Because barkers of the circus have ousted boxers from Madison Square Garden for six weeks, Tony Janiro of Youngstown, O., gets his chance to move into big time ring affairs sooner than he expected.

Janiro, regarded as about the best young lightweight to turn up in years, takes on Humberto Zavala of Mexico in the eight round main bout at St. Nicholas arena Friday. Because Tony is listed as only 19 years old, he is not permitted to box more than eight rounds.

Janiro has fought main events at St. Nick's before, tho he never was more than a semi-finalist in the Garden.

LEWIS WARNED U.S. MAY SEIZE STRUCK MINES

WLB Calls for End of Coal Tieups

Washington, D. C., April 5 (AP).—The war labor board tonight warned John L. Lewis that unless work stoppages in approximately 200 bituminous coal mines end promptly "the government will have no alternative but to seize and operate the mines on strike."

WLB Chairman George W. Taylor addressed a telegram to Lewis as president of the United Mine Workers and John J. O'Leary, UMW vice president, saying mine strikes are interfering with production of steel and other war materials.

"The board calls upon the United Mine Workers of America at this critical stage of the war to take every step necessary to bring about the necessary termination of these work stoppages and the resumption of the production of coal," Taylor's telegram to Lewis said.

Blast Furnaces Curbed

"Unless these work stoppages are terminated promptly, the government will have no alternative but to seize and operate the mines on strike."

Taylor said blast furnaces of some steel mills have been forced to close and that others probably would close within 24 hours unless full coal production is resumed.

Soft coal operators and union representatives have been bargaining here, so far without success, for a new contract to replace one that expired last Saturday. Lewis agreed to extend the contract 30 days, but nevertheless wildcat strikes have been widespread this week.

Denies Any Progress

Operators sought an opportunity to report lack of progress to the war labor board. But the board turned the plan down, pointing out that a report on the status of negotiations already had been set for Saturday.

Another negotiations session is to be held tomorrow morning.

Charles O'Neill, spokesman for the operators, said there had been "no progress in the last several days" and the operators wanted to know about "future procedure if no accord is reached here tomorrow."

Negotiations have been stalled for more than a month over Lewis' 18 demands, which include a union royalty of 10 cents on each ton of coal mined. The union chief took time out to go to New York and file 30 demands which would boost pay 25 per cent for anthracite workers, give them the same royalty asked for bituminous workers, and in addition set up some post-war job guarantees.

Anthracite Meeting Recessed

The hard coal meetings were in recess until Tuesday. Under the bituminous contract extension, both agreements now expire at the end of this month.

Proffered explanations for the continued widespread absenteeism ranged from a normally slow return to the pits after the Easter holiday followed by the anniversary of the miners eight hour day, to the miners' traditional no-contract-no-work policy. More bituminous miners in some areas heeded Lewis' call for work, but others dropped their tools. Reports indicated at least 40,000 idle.

The main increase in idleness was reported from Pennsylvania, where tabulation showed about 28,900 bituminous miners off the job, compared with 21,000 yesterday.

Butler Brothers Sales Dip 6.69 Pct. from Year Ago

Butler Brothers yesterday reported March sales were $10,526,534, a 6.69 per cent decline from a year ago. First quarter sales rose 0.18 per cent to $28,029,794.

First Quarter 'Satisfactory,' Says City Ice

Operations of City Ice and Fuel company in the first quarter of this year were "satisfactory," William J. Sinek, president, told stockholders yesterday at the annual meeting in Cleveland, O. The company has headquarters in Chicago.

William J. Sinek

Stockholders approved charter amendments providing for diversification of operations and abolishing the office of chairman of the board. Sinek said the company had no immediate plans for diversification, the change making it possible for directors to act later.

He said results of operations last year were gratifying, with all preferred stock retired and several non-operating properties disposed of advantageously.

Profit Steady Tho Sales Dip

Net income of National Cylinder Gas company in the first quarter was about the same as a year earlier despite lower sales, Charles J. Haines, president, told the annual meeting. He said sales were smaller partly as a result of weather in the midwest and east which delayed deliveries.

Haines said the company had no reconversion problems because its products were the same during the war as in peace time. He explained, however, that some lag in sales was expected while customers reconvert to peace time work.

"National Cylinder is building a plant for production of oxygen at Lubbock, Tex., which will soon be in operation," Haines said. "We are trying to expand into territories where there are no manufacturing facilities for our products as soon as we can do so economically and as soon as we can get materials. We are giving consideration to the improvement of present plants both from the distribution and production standpoints."

Simmons Earnings Rise

Simmons company sales and net profit in the first quarter were "satisfactorily" above those of a year ago, Grant G. Simmons, president, told stockholders in New York City.

A large peace time manufacturer of bedding equipment, the company is about 65 per cent engaged in war work. Its backlog of war orders is at a peak.

Simmons said that if raw materials were available facilities could be reconverted promptly, except for the San Francisco plant which is largely engaged in war work.

PREDICTS RISE IN PEOPLES GAS SALES IN PEACE

'44 Volume Biggest in Its History

A substantial increase after the war in total gas sales of Peoples Gas Light and Coke company was predicted yesterday by George A. Ranney, chairman, at the annual stockholders' meeting. He said 926 million therms of gas were sold last year, largest in the company's 90 year history.

Ranney said that within a year the company would extend its supply of natural gas north of the Division st. station. Last year 10 miles of pipe line were laid to transfer natural gas from the Crawford station to three production plants, increasing the company's capacity for supplying general customers by about a fourth, he explained.

Predicts Slow Civilian Gains

He predicted that Germany's defeat would permit some increase in civilian production, but that this movement would be slow until the Japanese war ends.

"It is important that our thinking on this subject be clear, for a cessation of war in Europe will not for many years bring a normal peace time condition in American industry," Ranney asserted.

"We are, however, thinking ahead for the future and laying by money for an increase in our normal inventories, in reasonable credit extensions when we again are able to sell gas appliances, for certain deferred work in civic improvements where our underground investments will be heavy, and for other matters that are shaping up but not to the point where we can definitely put our finger on the costs."

Puts Reserve in U. S. Bonds

He disclosed that the company had set aside 5 million dollars in United States government securities to aid in meeting post-war requirements, and said the management "when conditions permit, without detriment to the stockholders" will increase the fund.

Ranney said the company's entire tax bill last year increased $1,540,000 above 1943, federal income and excess profits taxes accounting for $1,472,000 of the rise.

"The ABC's of a federal income tax law are inescapable, namely, when gross income is increased, a federal income tax bill also goes up," he asserted. "In these days of war the money needs of the government made it necessary to increase the corporation excess profits taxes to their present level of 95 per cent and to make other changes.

Funded Debt Reduced.

"The impact of such tax upon revenue received from all sources is a heavy one. This statement should not be considered as a complaint against necessary federal taxes, but as a simple statement of fact."

Peoples' funded debt was reduced $1,250,000 last year and has been cut from $92,777,100 in 1932 to 61 million as of Dec. 31, 1944, Ranney said.

Stockholders elected as new directors William McCormick Blair, president of William Blair & Co., investment banking firm; Henry T. Heald, president of Illinois Institute of Technology, and James S. Knowlson, chairman and president of Stewart-Warner corporation. They fill the vacancies caused by the deaths of Donald R. McLennan and Robert F. Carr, and by the resignation of Charles B. Goodspeed.

Germans 'Lack Interest' in Securities, Says DNB

LONDON, April 5 (AP)—The allied armies' swift dash across Germany is playing hob with the reich stock market. "There is only very small business today owing to a lack of interest," the German news agency DNB said in a broadcast of a stock exchange report. "The situation is marked by a careful reluctance, as, in general, future developments will have to be expected."

Bids Congress Wield Powers to Save Nation

A powerful congress is the nation's only bulwark against dictatorship, and a deteriorated congress will mean the end of democracy in the United States, Marshall E. Dimock, professor of political science at Northwestern university, said yesterday.

Prof. Dimock spoke at a luncheon meeting of the Northwestern University associates in the Chicago club. He emphasized that the No. 1 job before the American people is the strengthening and modernizing of congress.

"Unless this job is done," he said, "congress cannot hold its own against the executive branch of the government."

Executive Illusions Cited

Prof. Dimock warned against the growing tendency to permit executive government to rule. "Executive government has become a byword," he said, "and increasingly we take it for granted. We must have strong leadership, it is argued; we cannot afford divided councils; we must concentrate power; we should trust those who are most competent—and in each case, so it is said, this is the executive."

These contentions are far removed from the eternal truths enunciated by the founders of America's constitutional system, he asserted.

"Congress must be the center of political gravity or our democracy is lost," he said. "Our elected legislators are the direct agents of popular sovereignty, and hence should be the center of government power."

Congress Holds U. S. Future

Solution of post-war problems must be in the hands of congress and whether the nation remains on an even keel financially will depend on the manner in which congress acts, he contended.

However, this responsibility is impossible without the proper kind of organization, Prof. Dimock said. He suggested five steps of reorganization by which congress can bolster its position in the national government, and grow in public esteem and leadership. These were:

1. Congress should dispose of nonessentials and concentrate upon major policy, divesting itself of private legislation, government of the District of Columbia, and other time consuming details.

More Staff Help Urged

2. Staff help to congress and individual congressmen should be stepped up.

3. Congress should be supplied with increased facilities for organized research because information supplied by lobbyists or the executive branch is often tinctured with prejudice.

4. Increase salaries of congressmen.

5. Slash the number of committees in congress from the present 80 to 15.

MADIGAN TO RUN OPA ALLOCATION OF LIVE STOCK

Washington, D. C., April 5 (AP)—John J. Madigan has been assigned to head the new live stock allocation program being prepared by OPA as an assistant to Max McCullough, rationing chief, it was learned today. Madigan formerly was director of OPA's food price division.

Plans for establishment of the allocation system were announced recently by the office of war information.

H. P. NELSON, FORMER HARVESTER MAN, WILL AID AUTO CONVERSION

Detroit, Mich., April 5 (AP)—Appointment of Henry P. Nelson to aid in the reconversion of the automotive industry to peace time production was announced today by Chairman Krug of the WPB. Nelson, who will remain director of the WPB aircraft division, is a $1 a year man on leave from International Harvester company where he was manager of production and schedules for the company's 19 plants.

Krug came to Detroit to consult with automotive leaders on the industry's reconversion problems, but after an all afternoon session said, "We did not talk about automobile production at all. No new cars will be approved until the collapse of Germany and maybe for some time after that."

He said various preliminaries were considered, such as machine tool equipment, plant rearrangement, and other technical questions that must be disposed of before automobile production can be resumed.

Branding as "not true" a report that passenger automobiles would be in production next fall, he said, "We are using all the materials and man power the country has to keep the war going and until that situation eases, it will not be possible to think of civilian car production."

Grains React; Losses in Rye Near 2 Cents

Grain futures reacted fractions to nearly 2 cents a bushel on the Chicago Board of Trade yesterday. The May contract led a decline of 1½ to 2¼ cents in rye before short covering and professional support trimmed losses to 1⅛ to 1⅞ cents at the close.

May wheat was unchanged, but deferred futures declined ⅝ to ⅞ cent. Corn was off ⅝ to ⅞ and oats ⅞ to 1⅛. Barley finished unchanged to 1¼ cents lower.

Cash in on Large Rise

Profit cashing on rye purchases after the advance of 10¾ cents since Saturday started the decline. Further selling came when Russia denounced her nonaggression pact with Japan. Short covering decreased and the volume of trade shrank.

May wheat never was under pressure. Prices receded quickly after an early rise on short covering only to rally rapidly near the close.

Cash wheat brought ceiling prices amid conflicting reports regarding the prospective supply of boxcars. Some easing in the shortage of wheat supplies in southwestern markets was indicated.

Canadian Oats on Way.

Scattered liquidation developed in oats on prospects that 2 million bushels of Canadian oats would be available in Chicago late next week. Brokers reported, however, that most or all of the oats had been sold for shipment and would not be available for delivery on futures contracts. Demand for domestic oats remained slow and sales were made in the open market at 7½ to 9 cents below the ceiling.

Several lake ships loaded with corn for the east were unable to clear from elevator slips Wednesday because of low water, but most of the grain fleet was expected to leave port before the end of the week.

STOCKS SLIDE WHEN REDS END JAPANESE PACT

Turnover Remains Extremely Light

New York, April 5 (AP)—International news, favoring the allies and a shorter war, tripped up the stock market today and, altho selling was exceptionally light, prices declined.

Apprehension that reconversion may be difficult revived when Moscow denounced the Russian-Japanese neutrality treaty, Emperor Hirohito named a new premier and the possibility of a peace offensive developing appeared. Gen. Eisenhower's warning that formal Nazi surrender was improbable was not enough to offset the other events as a market factor.

The ticker tape moved slowly during the forenoon, in the first two hours of which only 190,000 shares were traded. Dealings then began to expand, but offerings never were urgent. Turnover was 680,000 shares, compared with 520,000 yesterday. Closing losses ranged from fractions to more than a point.

Average Loses Half Point

The Associated Press 60 stock average was off 0.5 at 60.1, first setback since March 26. Of 884 issues traded, 595 declined, 121 advanced, and 168 were unchanged.

Prominent in the retreat were Santa Fe, Southern Pacific, Great Northern, Baltimore and Ohio, United States Steel, Chrysler, United States Rubber, Goodyear, Montgomery Ward, North American, Western Union A, Radio corporation, Douglas Aircraft, United Aircraft, Boeing, Eastern Air Lines, J. C. Penney, Westinghouse Electric, General Electric and Kennecott. Small advances were retained by American Telephone, Consolidated Edison, Texas company, Standard Oil [N. J.], Sears Roebuck and Johns-Manville.

BOND MARKET LOWER

New York, April 5 (AP)—The bond market ended lower today in sales of $8,640,000 against $7,932,000 yesterday. A number of rails, mostly secondary, rose fractions to more than a point at one time, but lost a substantial part of the advance in a late slide.

Retaining advances of a point or more were Milwaukee general 4s, Rock Island 4s, Childs company 5s, Delaware and Hudson 4s, New Orleans Terminal 4s, and New Orleans, Texas and Mexico 5s. Losing a major part and in some cases all of early gains were bonds of the Baltimore and Ohio, New York Central, New Haven, Philadelphia and Reading Coal, Frisco, Seaboard, Southern Pacific, and Western Union.

CHICAGO PRICES FALL

Prices fell on reduced turnover of 27,000 shares yesterday on the Chicago Stock exchange. Most active issues included Automatic Washer, up ¼; Central and Southwest Utilities, up ½; Chicago corporation common and Peabody Coal, both unchanged, and Commonwealth Edison, down ½.

STRIKE FORCES MORRELL MEAT PLANT TO CLOSE

Ottumwa, Ia., April 5 (AP)—The meat packing plant of John Morrell & Co. was shut down today as pickets refused admittance to about 3,100 plant and office employers.

Union officials said they knew nothing about the strike until they arrived at the plant. Company executives had no comment. It was reported that the strike resulted from assignment of some employes to other than their usual jobs.

Three Axle Plants Closed

Detroit, Mich., April 5 (AP)—The strike of maintenance workers of the Timken-Detroit Axle company closed three of its plants today, making more than 6,000 workers idle.

2 Pct. Upturn in Freight Car Use Expected

The Mid-West Shippers Advisory board yesterday estimated that midwest shippers will require 1,281,515 freight cars in the second 1945 quarter, 2.1 per cent more than the 1,255,015 cars loaded in the second 1944 quarter. The board predicted a gain of 0.5 per cent in loadings for the first 1945 quarter over the 1944 period.

Of the 25 commodities used in the board's forecast, increased shipments were expected in all except seven, four of which are likely to decrease and three remain unchanged.

I. M. Peters, general chairman, said that among the commodities of which shipments are expected to increase the most are: Cement, 17 per cent; grain, 15; hay, straw, and alfalfa, 12, and fertilizer, brick and clay products, petroleum and petroleum products, and flour, meal and other mill products, 10 each.

Live Stock Shipments to Dip

Commodities in which shipments are expected to decrease most are live stock 20 per cent and machinery and boilers 10.

Coal and coke shipments, the largest item among the 25 commodities, 363,969 cars of which will be shipped, are expected to show no change from the second 1944 quarter. Fred A. Schleifer, chairman of the board's coal and coke committee, said that reports from major coal operators indicated the car supply has been satisfactory, but that occasional shortages have occurred.

"The general opinion is that the carriers are performing a tremendous task considering the fact that their man power is diminishing and equipment becoming obsolescent. Physical condition of equipment remains about as reported for the first 1945 quarter. Cars received at mines continue to require cleaning and conditioning before being loaded."

BRICKER TERMS WORLD MONEY PLANS UNSOUND

New York, April 5 (AP)—John W. Bricker, Republican Vice Presidential candidate in 1944, today told the Chamber of Commerce of the State of New York that the Bretton Woods monetary program is "unsound" for the United States, and characterized the program as an attempt to erect "a superstructure of stabilization upon a foundation of unstabilized economies."

"There is very little, if anything, in the program to encourage the participating countries to stabilize their own economies," he said. "Rather, this Bretton Woods proposal extends an implied invitation to the countries to defer coming to grips with their economic problems."

Bricker said the program offered some advantages "from the point of view of some of our allies, but from the point of view of this country its unsoundness is, I think, rather obvious." He called for a balanced federal budget "within the earliest practicable time after the war" and for "a system of taxation that will encourage production."

TRANSIT PLANS FACE PROBLEM IN PAYING WAY

Savings and Costs Are Compared

BY WILLIAM SHINNICK

If the poposed Chicago metropolitan transit authority is to be a success it must spend about 125 million dollars over a period of 10 years or more on rehabilitation of the surface and elevated lines.

Mayor Kelly, who has the assistance of Gov. Green in the effort to end the city's traction ills thru such an authority, has said the improvement program can be financed with about 30 million dollars which are in the treasury of the surface lines and by earnings. Some experts consider this optimistic thinking.

Some Savings Indicated.

Several of them, with no intention to halt the plan, have analyzed the real and projected figures on which the estimate is based. They have decided that public ownership will effect some savings, principally in freedom from taxes. The plan apparently has other features which may sharply reduce these advantages.

As a beginning the experts offer these facts:

1. The surface and L lines, now carrying the heaviest traffic since 1930, earned $6,154,000 in the last year for which full figures are available.

2. The transit authority must borrow at least 87 million dollars to buy the two properties and must pay interest on and amortize this debt.

3. The companies show that taxes paid amount to $4,778,000 for one year.

Proceeding from this base, the analysts determined that interest and amortization on 87 million at 3 per cent [it was assumed the purchase price can be borrowed and retired in 25 years] would be $4,700,000 a year. They said that a wage increase not fully approved in Washington, D. C., would cost the authority about 3½ million more.

City to Boost Charge.

The city has shown an intention to exact as compensation 3 per cent of the authority's gross revenues, double or $1,271,000 more than the 1½ per cent being paid. The three items add up to $9,471,000. Subtracting the earnings of $6,154,000 leaves a deficit of $3,317,000. This is more than made up by the tax saving and a net excess of $1,461,000 is left.

This could be spent for modernization. So could a large part of the funds being set aside to cover renewals and depreciation, of which the amount in the last year fully accounted for [1943] was $5,824,000. In the opinion of the experts it is fair to say that the amount available for modernization, from current earnings, would be 4½ million a year.

At this level, 25 years would be required to complete the modernizing. The figures, moreover, take no account of the fact that profits in 1943 and 1944 were more than double those of pre-war years.

Pension Cost Ignored.

They take no account of the cost of a special pension fund. Pensions cost the surface lines only about $300,000 a year. This item in a few years might climb to 2 or even 3 million if many veteran employes choose to become pensioners and there are a large number of these.

It takes no account of additional wage increases or of subway rental, if any, nor of the possibility of severe traffic losses after the war. The wage hike is not a figment of imagination. Detroit's municipal operation pays higher wages than the Chicago companies and donated nearly 2 million for pension in 1944.

Some aldermen believe the city should waive compensation and will talk about it today at a meeting of the council's local transportation committee.
